MADAME CAILLAUX IN COURT

PARIS, March 23.—Mme. Henriette Caillaux, slayer of Gaston Calmette, was again taken to the Palace of Justice this afternoon for further examination as to the murder of the editor.

The court of the examining magistrate was heavily guarded and additional police were stationed about the building.

Mme. Caillaux smiled cheerfully at several acquaintances whom she passed while entering the law courts.

She was fashionably garbed and showed that she has given great attention to her appearance. Her examination was along the same lines as that conducted Saturday. She reiterated her declaration that she had killed Calmette because of his attacks upon her husband.

MUTINY IN PRISON.

Favors granted to Mme. Caillaux caused a mutiny at St. Lazare prison today. It was nipped in the bud, however, by the seizure of two ringleaders, who were locked in dark cells while their prison mates shrieked excrations upon the authorities and the woman assassin.

Double guards were placed in the prison after the outbreak, which was organized as a protest against the treatment accorded to Mme. Caillaux, who has been given larger quarters and is regarded as an honored guest rather than a prisoner charged with murder.

"Down with the murderess," was the cry that rang through the old prison while the mutineers' leaders were being thrust into dungeons.

While this exciting scene was be-

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Thomas J. Costello today was recommended to President Wilson for appointment as postmaster at Springfield, Mass., by Postmaster-General Burleson.

PREPARES FOR DEATH IN CHAIR

William Dorr, the murderer waiting death in the death house at State Prison, was seized with a violent attack of indigestion early today, and Warden Bridges said it was caused by over-eating.

Dorr, who killed George E. Marsh —a wealthy Lynn man—will be electrocuted before the half-hour strikes after midnight tonight.

The condemned man, since being brought up from the Salem jail, has been a healthy and a fairly cheerful prisoner until today. His guards this morning reported to the warden that he awoke before 5 o'clock, and was very nervous. When breakfast time came he refused to eat. From 5 till 8 o'clock he was restless, moving constantly about the cell; and at 8:30 he suffered a violent attack of indigestion.

WRITES FAREWELLS.

Dr. Joseph L. McLaughlin, the prison physician, reached the death house half an hour later—but found Dorr had suddenly quieted down and was sound asleep. The physician did not disturb him, but went his rounds of the institution. When Dorr awoke, a guard notified the doctor, and he returned to Dorr's cell. The attack shortly passed away, and at about 11 o'clock Dorr ate a lunch of toast, sliced oranges and tea. He did not seem hungry.

Immediately after his lunch Dorr asked for writing materials and started writing letters. The first was to his mother—who is in seclusion near Boston—and will not visit the condemned man before his death. The other letters were to sisters in Maine and California.

The Rev. M. J. Murphy, Catholic chaplain, spent most of the day in the death house. Dorr's spiritual adviser, the Rev. Arthur E. Harriman, was detained in Lynn till late in the day. Dorr's only visitor this afternoon was his attorney, Charles N. Harney, with word that Governor Walsh had finally refused to take action on Dorr's appeal for mercy.

REQUESTS CREMATION.

The Rev. Mr. Harriman reached the death house late this afternoon. Shortly afterward, Warden Bridges went to Dorr's cell and in the presence of Dorr's spiritual counsellor, notified the condemned man that he would be electrocuted shortly after midnight tonight.

The remainder of Dorr's time on earth will be spent either in talk with the Rev. Mr. Harriman or in reading Shakespeare or the Bible.

Dorr will be electrocuted at about ten minutes past midnight. He will be the nineteenth man electrocuted in Charlestown, since December 17, 1901, and Warden Bridges has been in charge of each execution. The condemned man has asked that his body be cremated. Accordingly, after the autopsy required by law, the body will be turned over to the family, cremated—probably at Mount Auburn—and the ashes will be taken to his old home in Stockton, Cal., by his mother.

New Hampshire Boy Killed by Own Gun

CANTERBURY, N. H., March 23.—While Herman Pickard, sixteen, was dragging a shotgun, muzzle first, from a closet in his home, the weapon was accidentally discharged and the youth instantly killed.

CURLEY OPENS ON O'MEARA

Mayor Curley today carried to the Legislature his war on Police Commissioner O'Meara concerning regulation of expenses in the police department.

Mayor Curley tried to come to an agreement with Commissioner O'Meara on pay reductions. Meeting rebuff he proceeded to go over the police commissioner's head by filing with the clerk of the House of Representatives a petition and bill entitled "An act to reduce the expenses of the police department of the city of Boston."

The bill reads:

"The Mayor of the city of Boston is hereby authorized to reduce the compensation of any of the officials, employes or members of the police department in the city of Boston to the scale existing prior to the 16th of October in the year 1912. Any increase hereafter made in the compensation of any of the officials, employes or members of said department during the last three months of the term of any Mayor of the city of Boston shall be unlawful and void."

'Mother' Jones Is Arrested or Train

WALSENBURG, Col., March 23.—"Mother" Mary Jones, the strike leader who has been a form centre during the labor trouble in the Southern Colorado coal fields, was arrested by State troops on a train here today while on her way to Trinidad in defiance of orders issued when she was deported from there. She was taken off the train despite her protests and hurried to the Huerfano County Hospital, where she will be kept under guard.

By Hero Received by the Governor

CABINET SAYS ULSTER MUST YIELD TO LAW

First train for the front starts in an hour. First steamer for England starts this afternoon. Every British officer now in Capetown will take one or the other. Lord Kitchener to mutinous officers during the Boer war.

By HERBERT TEMPLE

LONDON, March 23.—Mutiny in the British army growing out of the Ulster crisis will be crushed with an iron hand.

Going directly from a conference with King George to the House of Commons today, Colonel Seely, Secretary of War in the Asquith Cabinet, announced that all of those officers who had resigned in Ireland rather than proceed to Ulster had been ordered to rejoin their forces.

His statement that defections from the army would not be tolerated was cheered by the Liberals and jeered by the Unionist opposition, which has fostered the Ulster rebellion with its anti-home rule support.

Secretary Seely spoke slowly and enunciated every word clearly, delivering his message to the nation's Parliament as a solemn warning.

There was a remarkable demonstration in the Commons when Parliament convened. The Liberals cheered Premier Asquith when he entered, while the Unionists jeered and hissed the premier.

Similar receptions were given to Churchill and Chancellor Lloyd George. As soon as the ministers were in their seats the Unionists began to "heckle" representatives of the government on the Ulster situation.

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS PRECAUTIONARY.

Premier Asquith answered the questions put to him as to the military actions in the present crisis. He declared that there had been no material additions to the regular troops stationed in Ireland, of whom there were 28,755 at the beginning of February. He refused to say whether army volunteers would be used in Ulster.

Secretary of War Seely was called upon next for information as to the cause of the troops movement to Ireland. He told his questioners that the government's action was only one of precaution and that the troops were sent to Ulster to protect the

HARRY THURSTON PECK BLOWS BRAINS OUT.

STAMFORD, Ct., March 23.—Harry Thurston Peck, former professor at Columbia University, New York City, who has been residing here for some time, blew his brains out with a revolver at his boarding house this afternoon. His landlady, hearing a shot, found him lying in a pool of blood in his room, a bullet hole in his head and a revolver by his side.

STEFFENS SAYS NEW ENGLAND IS CORRUPT FROM TOP TO BOTTOM

New England is the darkest part of the United States. It is corrupted from top to bottom. The people are corrupted. In Rhode Island and Connecticut, in Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine, and in parts of Massachusetts, voters take cash bribes at the polls. This is the next to the last stage of political corruption. Legislators are purchased everywhere in the United States. The elected representatives of the people sell them out in all parts of the country; and that is bad enough. So long, however, as the people are sound, there's a chance for loyal leadership and reform. But when the people themselves sell themselves out for money, there is little hope left. That means that corruption, which began centuries before democracy was thought of—the corruption of the people means that the disease which begins on high has gone all the way through the body politic to the very foundation of society and the state.—

Lincoln Steffens in the April Metropolitan.

Lincoln Steffens, municipal muckraker, who came to Boston for the Finance Commission and investigated conditions here, in the current Metropolitan Magazine makes sensational charges against Massachusetts and New England—charges of wholesale vote-buying of Massachusetts legislators for sale at $4 a vote, and of a New England sunk in the "very worst" way that is a pretty sure sign of the approach of the final sign of corruption.

After making straightforward accusations that votes are for sale by wholesale in New England, Mr. Steffens says:

OLD STOCK FOR SALE.

"Except in a few places (which he names) the common people do not habitually take bribes—outside of New England. There, our race, American people—is not sound. Indeed, it is the good old American stock out in the country and in the small towns that is most regularly for sale. In Rhode Island clergymen condoned the system. In Connecticut I discovered that while the 'white' voters, selling by retail, had got $2.25 a head, the 'dagoes,' going by job lots, had brought $2.50 a head.

"Cheap? Yes, these good, old, unmixed New Englanders are cheap. And so are their representatives. The lobbyist of a combination of 'independent' manufacturers who had fought a trust 'with fire' in twenty-two States said he had bought Massachusetts legislators for as low as four dollars ($4) to vote for the same measure for which he had paid as high as $1,000, and never lower than $250, in Missouri (where he was exposed and where it cost him). That was the cheapest bribery he had ever heard of.

"The governments of Connecticut, Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine are corrupted by, and they represent, their railroads, public service and other special interests.

"THE VOTE-SELLERS."

"The vote-sellers in New England are independent. They stand up for their rights, as they see them. They don't see very far, but they can be shown and they 'hate to be outwitted in a trade as much as they love to win. An arithmetical calculation which made plain that the citizen who took $2.50 offered at a certain election really gave up $3.10 as his share of the losses to his town by graft had the effect of raising the price to $3.25. This calculation was rough and it took note only of local stealings.

"Suppose someone should show these cunning traders how much more they lose indirectly through State and national graft; the grand larceny of lands, mines and other natural resources; the tariff, railroad rates and the increased cost 'in-dependent' manufacturers who had fought a trust 'with fire' in twenty-two States said he had bought Massachusetts legislators for as low as four dollars ($4) to vote for the same measure for which he had paid as high as $1,000, and never lower than $250, in Missouri (where he was exposed and where it cost him). That was the cheapest bribery he had ever heard of.

REBELS DRIVE FEDERALS BACK INTO TORREON

MEXICO CITY, March 23.—Federal defeats in the fighting about Torreon are reported in dispatches to the war department today. These indicate that General Velasco's troops have been driven back into the city, and that the Constitutionalists are making an assault from three sides.

BERMEJILLO, Mexico, March 23.—The long-expected battle of Torreon is on. General Villa's big guns began the bombardment of the Mexican Federal stronghold at dawn today, hurling shells into Gomez Palacio and the suburbs of Torreon.

All the northern suburbs of Torreon, with the exception of Gomez Palacio and Lerdo, were captured by General Villa in a daring night attack that brought the Constitutionalist army within nine miles of the besieged city.

Moving his troops forward under cover of darkness, the rebel commander took up a strategic position, and when the first light of early morning showed today he gave the signal for a bombardment of Gomez Palacio. The rebel big guns immediately opened fire and the greatest artillery duel in the revolution against the dictatorship of President Huerta began.

FEDERAL GUNS ANSWER.

The Federal guns mounted on La Pila mountain replied sharply to the rebel fire, while General Villa dashed from place to place directing the alignment of his troops and dispatching orders to detachments at a distance to hasten their arrival.

Leaving the artillery to the direction of General Felipe Angeles, General Villa directed the movements of the cavalry and infantry preparing for the general assault that will take place tomorrow.

Reports received from the rebel commander during the night and this morning showed that the investment of Torreon had been made practically complete.

"It is only a matter of a few hours" was the confident prediction sent by Villa to the Constitutionalist headquarters here. "The artillery will clear the way for the infantry and cavalry. Torreon is ours."

Villa has made extraordinary plans to prevent the escape of General Velasco's troops when Torreon falls. All railroads leading out of the city have been cut.

TO ATTACK TONIGHT.

General Calixto Contreras and his Durango brigade is expected to attack Torreon from the south tonight. General Fanofil Natera, commander-in-chief of the Zacatecas brigade of the Constitutionalist army, and the Arreta brothers are co-operating with Contreras in an attack from the south and east.

A report to General Villa from General E. A. Benavides says the towns of Zargoza and Matamoras were occupied by his force Sunday.

The commissary department is splendidly managed and is doing effective work in keeping the men supplied with food of good quality.

"To fight well and to stand the hardships of long marches men must be well fed" was General Villas' comment when the good work of his commissary department was called to his attention. "One of the reasons I delayed the attack on Torreon was to put my commissary department in good condition. We have plenty of supplies and what is better those in charge of them know how to get good food as well as to give good attention to the men."

Gallivan Honored by Providence Elks

James A. Gallivan was today presented an Elks' charm, containing a genuine elk's tooth, gold mounted, and diamond studded, by a committee representing the Providence Lodge of Elks, before whom he delivered the memorial address in December. The street commissioner could not imagine what John Hurley and Frank H. Williams of the Providence Lodge were doing in this city when they called at his home today. But he soon discovered their mission from the Providence Elks.

Hickey to Speak in 7 Wards Tonight

He will start in Neponset and wind up at Floyd square. He will be accompanied by Edward D. Collins, former member of the Governor's Council, Representative John J. Lydon, Secretary Daniel W. Casey of the Democratic City Committee, Matthew Martin, Representative Thomas J. Casey, Representative George Wall, Representative William N. Cronin and John E. Noonan.

ADVICE ABOUT HOW TO REMOVE UNSIGHTLY HAIR

Many physicians use the ingredients constituting the secret for removing hair in connection with their laboratory work. This shows conclusively how perfectly harmless its action is. Thousands of women have discovered this, too, and have learned how totally unnecessary it is to go around with unbeautiful growths on lip, chin, cheek, neck or arms. They apply a few drops of El Rado, the liquid hair remover. Almost instantly the hair vanishes, leaving the skin smooth, velvety and even whiter than before. This is because, positively without the slightest harm, the hair has been dissolved.

El Rado is now a standard toilet article, used by thousands of women. You need have no more hesitation in asking for and using a El Rado than in asking for and using a toilet powder. Try El Rado on your arm, prove for yourself that it will do everything claimed. Your money back if you are not entirely satisfied. MISS ELIZABETH SHEA, of Springfield, who is to be the bride of Walter Maranville, the Brave's shortstop, when the National League baseball season closes next October. Photograph by G. White of Boston.

When the tumult and the shouting dies in October, that is to say, after the Braves have won the pennant and the World's Series (Hah-hum! This is sleepy weather)—why, then, Walter Maranville, the Rabbit shortstop, is going to get married.

She is Elizabeth Shea and she lives in Springfield, and she and Walter used to play together when Walter was a boy—which at this writing is only a matter of a couple of years ago, as Maranville is still lurking very near the drop-the-ballot-in-here,-young-man age.

"Till next October" seemed at first a long while to wait, but George Stallings believes in the hoodoo on bridegrooms, and he wants the Rabbit to give it a Winter to wear off.

This is to be Maranville's third year in the big league. He came to Boston from New Bedford in the Fall of 1912, played a few games, and then in 1913 proceeded to set the league on fire. He's a little man with a big pair of hands and a nimble set of legs. When a ball gets into those hands, it kisses itself good night and goes to sleep. When a bat in those hands introduces itself to the ball, the ball goes away from there anywhere up to a home run's worth. And when those legs begin to pump, it takes a professional bee-catcher to tag the Rabbit. It cost the Boston club about $4,000 in money and players—and was a bargain!

FIND JAPS AT MAGDALENA DEFYING U. S.

LOS ANGELES, March 23.—Six Japanese engineers bearing passports and letters from Huerta are now completing an elaborate military survey of Magdalena Bay and a careful examination of soil, water supply and mineral deposits of the country eastward, far inland.

Visiting all the hamlets, towns and cities to the eastward, principally along the gulf shore to the peninsula, the leader of this expedition talked freely with influential Mexicans of the probability of Japanese occupation in alliance against the United States. Everywhere the Japanese found warm approval of such an alliance.

This statement was made here today by William E. and George E. Ailn, brothers, upon their return from a trip to Magdalena Bay.

Throughout the Magdalena region and at Ensenada and aboard the steamship Benito Juarez, wherever these Americans met intelligent Mexicans they were regaled with boastful declarations that Huerta is being supplied by Japan with millions in money and liberal shipments of ammunition.

They were informed that upon the first aggressive move of the United States Japan would seize the Philippines, occupy every Mexican Pacific port with its warships and throw an army into Mexico to take the field with the Mexicans against the United States.

Elks Give $1,000 for 'Boom Boston' Fund

Timothy McCarthy, exalted ruler of the Boston Lodge of Elks, today presented Mayor Curley $1,000 collected among the lodge members for the Boom Boston Fund. This brings the total to something like $71,000. The mayor, thanking McCarthy, added: "Let's hope some of the other lodges follow suit."

Delegation to See 'Pilate's Daughter'

Clew to McCarrick Boy at Clementon

PHILADELPHIA, March 23.—Detectives in autos and farmers on horseback and afoot formed a human dragnet about Clementon, N. J., today in the hunt for eight-year-old Warren McCarrick, who disappeared a week ago last Thursday. A boy answering the description of the missing lad was seen there Saturday night with three men from whom he was apparently trying to get away. Moving pictures are to be used in the search for the child.

The missing boy's parents received a second letter today demanding that $7,500 ransom be paid for the return of the boy. The letter said unless the money was paid the boy would be killed.

1 KILLED, SCORE HURT IN RIOT OF GOULD STRIKERS

BUFFALO, March 23.—One man was shot dead, ten others were wounded and a score more or less seriously injured in a riot upon a train bearing strike-breakers from Buffalo to the plant of the Gould Coupler Company at Depew.

The train left Buffalo at 9:30 o'clock this morning and when about a mile from Depew the engineer, seeing a great crowd upon the tracks, slowed down the engine. Before the train came to a stop it was boarded by about fifty frenzied strikers. Guns, clubs and other implements of war were used. Fifty or sixty shots were fired from revolvers by private detectives accompanying the strike breakers.

Stanilaus F. Komokfki was shot and instantly killed while attempting to board the train. The strikers broke ground after several shots were fired and the engineer reversed the levers backing the train into Buffalo. Ambulances were sent for and the injured taken to hospitals.

Application was made at 19 o'clock by officials of the Gould company to call out one of the regiments of the National Guard. Sheriff Becker was notified and he immediately rushed a number of deputies to the scene.

The moulders and coremakers at the Gould plant have been on strike for several weeks, and at various times have made threats against the company and strike-breakers.

CHILDREN, LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physics simply don't realize what they do. The children revolt to well founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is perfect, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind, with contempt.

250,000 NOW OPPOSE FIGHT TO RETURN THAW

NEW YORK, March 23.—Over 250,000 persons were today on record as opposing the return of Harry K. Thaw to Matteawan.

Assemblyman John E Golden, who leads the fight against further efforts to bring Thaw back to New York State has just received another batch of 100,000 names signed to a petition of protest.

Last week 250,000 names were received appended to such petitions, and it was predicted today at Albany that many more would be forthcoming as soon as publicity had been given to the movement in Thaw's behalf.

The names were gathered with considerable secrecy. As an evidence of the trend of public feeling, supporting the declaration of Thaw's friends that the sympathy of the people is with him, the receipt of the names comes like a bombshell dropped in the camp of the men back of William Travers Jerome, who leads the fight to put Thaw again behind the asylum bars.

THAW SCORES JEROME IN CHALLENGE, APPEALS TO THE N. Y. ASSEMBLY

CONCORD, N. H., March 23.—Harry K. Thaw has given out the following statement, rapping W. T. Jerome and challenging Attorney-General Carmody to cite a parallel to the Thaw case as regards imprisonment:

"Attorney-General Carmody states that he intends to push the proceedings against me to the limit, no matter what action the Assembly takes, and that it is an insult to the intelligence of the State for the people to present petitions stating my case to be persecution. The people of New York have not petitioned the Attorney-General, but have petitioned the Assembly, which, under the Constitution and decisions of the Court of Appeals, has been held to be the supreme power in the State.

"The fact that the Attorney-General openly admits the weakness of his office by stating he had to employ extra counsel to take charge of an extraordinary case should evoke regret on the part of the public, especially since he also had the regular deputy continually on the case.

"Mr. Cardoy's further statement that the public will say a rich man's money defeated the ends of justice is nonsense. It is vicious wealth and influence that is behind Jerome.

"Under New York law I am acquitted. I challenge the Attorney-General to show a single case in this country where a man in similar case has been imprisoned eight years, just as I challenged Jerome to state that he did not pretend I was insane in 1907 and declare I was sane in 1908.

"I respectfully ask members of the Assembly by their vote tomorrow night to express the sentiment of the people of their districts."

Rabbi Pleads for Sermons in English

NEW YORK, March 23.—"The sermon in the synagogue must be in English if traditional Judaism is to become intelligible to the younger generation of Jews in this country," said Dr. Samuel Schechter, president of the United Synagogue of America, in an address before the second annual convention of that organization. "Large numbers of young American Jews," he said, "are not familiar with Yiddish."

Hungarian Count to Seek Funds Here

VIENNA, March 23.—Count Michael Karolyi, president of the Hungarian Independent party, is making a trip to the United States and will reach New York April 2. He will direct his efforts toward drawing Hungarians now in America into the home Parliamentary campaign. He will also seek funds for the Independent party.

Girl Burns to Death, Mother in Hospital

BELFAST, Me., March 23.—The four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Faust was burned to death and her mother is in the hospital suffering from burns sustained in trying to save the child's life. The child, in playing near the stove, ignited her clothes.

SOCIETY GIRLS GIVE 'MADNESS OF MOMENT' TO SHOW NEW DANCES

Jessie Cushing (at left), and Amelia Burnham, who will assist Lilia Viles Wyman in demonstrating the very latest dances at Jordan Hall.

"The Madness of the Moment" is the title of a dancing demonstration planned by Mrs. Lilia Viles Wyman for Jordan Hall, Monday evening, March 30. Miss Amelia Burnham and Miss Jessie Cushing will be the bright, particular stars of the program, and the furlana and the tango will be shown in all their varieties.

Miss Cushing will begin with a series of dances interpretative of Chopin interludes; and the society folk are eagerly anticipating this feature of the program. Miss Cushing is a Conservatory graduate. But the real feature is the exhibition which Mrs. Wyman has called "The Madness of the Moment."

There will be a tango, a hesitation waltz, a "Heavenly Rest" (this dance is Mrs. Wyman's composition), a Brazilian Maxixe, the new "Half and Half" introduced by the Vernon Castles, and finally, the furlana. Le Roy Young and others will help Mrs. Wyman and Miss Burnham with these demonstrations. The stage is to be set as a modern ball room, and it is announced that colored wigs and all the latest fashionable wrinkles—yes, wrinkles are half your costume now—will be at hand.

GIVE PORTRAIT OF THE TYPICAL AMERICAN GIRL

Miss Elsie Rowe, the Typical American girl, whose photograph was selected by three Boston artists from among thousands of pictures sent in competition in the Boston AMERICAN contest, as the unanimous winner of the prize, was yesterday presented the portrait of herself at her home at No. 97 Washington street, Gloucester.

Miss Rowe expressed her delight at the painting and in a very elevating little speech thereof her friends thanked the AMERICAN.

The portrait, which was draped with the folds of a new American flag, was finally uncovered and presented by the Rev. Levi M. Powers, pastor of the First Universalist Society of Gloucester, preceding which the following poem written for the occasion by Miss Carrie E. Parks, a Smith College graduate and teacher in the Gloucester High School, was read by Mr. Powers:

"In the heart of our old city
Are many things most dear
Her rugged shores and sheltering bays,
Her distinguished line of former days
Her skippers who knew no fear.

No Summer winds are gentler
Than were our dear Greek play.
No sass more like, nor dance more fair,
No perfect pella that rested in air
Than skip to catch their prey.

Yet oceh these suffer passing
From surface to deeper sense,
We find the loveliness in sound and shape,
We know full well the tragic tale
Of every sea so wide.

And through years of classical surgery
In the homes of our seafaring men
Have lived the memory of other days
With heart and will that naught could down,
Their faith restored again.

So in varied forms of duty
These maids and mothers wrought.
Till today, in mind and soul,
In sense of body, strength of will
And in thought,

That share in part our city's pride
With those of years gone by
These lovers of home and sea and all
These sisters of ours everywhere
Our country's finest flower.

CHOSEN FROM 10,000.

In the presentation speech Mr. Parsons said:

"There is surely no reason why beauty should be considered a fatal gift. A pleasing personality ought to be a capable of winning and giving happiness as the voice of the singer.

"It should be a source of satisfaction not only to yourself, Miss Rowe, but to all the people of Gloucester that in the opinion of such competent judges looking at the portraits of more than ten thousand others, you have been unanimously adjudged the Typical American Girl. Those who know you best believe that not only in your features, but in your good sense, self-reliance, wholesome ideas of life and ability to care for yourself, you are also a typical American girl."

Following the unveiling of the portrait, which was painted by the noted Boston woman artist, Mrs. Maris Danforth Page, and Miss Rowe's speech of thanks, refreshments were served. Miss Rowe appeared charming in a gown of white charmeuse with American beauty roses in her corsage.

A distinguished guest of the occasion was Edward L. Rowe, eighty-one years old, the grandfather of Miss Rowe.

AMONG THE GUESTS.

Among the others present were:

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Rowe, Miss Rowe's father and mother; Walter L. Rowe, Mrs. Everett W. Rowe, Mrs. William H. Perkins, Miss Alice Perkins, Mrs. Joseph O. Proctor, Mrs. Edward S. Griffin, Mrs. Wilmot A. Reed, Mrs. William H. Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Tarr, Mrs. Howard Steele, Mrs. Benjamin A. Parsons, Mrs. Russell Smith, Mrs. Nathaelle Gorton, Mrs. Anthy Gorton, Mrs. Theodore Dunn, Mrs. Richard Fisher, Mrs. Sherman Tarr, Mrs. Daniel Babson, Miss Marion Babson, Mrs. Lloyd Bradley, Miss Belle Tarr, Mrs. George Whittemore, Mrs. William Shute, Miss Alice Parsons, Miss Eliza Parsons, Mrs. Alfred Merchant, Miss Eliza Rogers, Mrs. Dr. Gilbert Pettingill, Mrs. Carleton Phillips, Mrs. Howard Scanson, Mrs. Sarah Morgan, Mrs. Percy Bennett, Miss Hester Fisher, and Miss Lillian Pollard, the latter of Boston.

EDISON "CANS" SHY BIRD SONGS IN EVERGLADES

NEW YORK, March 23.—Thomas A. Edison, who has been on a vacation at Fort Meyer, Fla., for four weeks, can't stand the "exhaustion" of taking a rest. He has written to his secretary at West Orange, N. J., that he's "all tired out" and "longs for the laboratory."

"I'm not meant for rest," Mr. Edison wrote. "When I'm idle I get tired and out of sorts and when I'm out of sorts I'm good for nothing."

He says he will be home next week, although Mrs. Edison is trying to force him to stay in the South. With him when he returns will come an unusual collection of phonographic records. Mr. Edison is a bird lover, as are his companions on his vacation —Henry Ford, the automobile man, and John Burroughs, the aged naturalist.

Several weeks ago they set out in the undercrush of the Florida Everglades a number of machines which could be set in motion by a push button a mile away. These were intended to catch the songs of shy swamp birds. The experiment was successful and scores of strange birds songs were obtained.

To bring them back, Mr. Edison will use a new record carrier which he invented while away and which was made at West Orange from his written specifications. It will also be used in the future for the transportation of delicate records so that they will not crack or chip.

The carrier consists of an iron receptacle, which is fur lined. The records are placed in this, with soft rubber between them. Then they are screwed down compactly and pneumatic coverings are placed over top and bottom so that the record cannot move in any direction.

'Billy' Sunday Not a Snail, Says Pastor

NEW YORK, March 23.—The Rev. F. C. Reisner of Grace M. E. Church delivered a sermon entitled "R. U. A. Pneumonochlamydite?" Dr. Reisner said he knew "Billy" Sunday's methods did not suit some of the dignitaries, but "he is not a pneumonochlamydite. A pneumonochlamydite is a snail."

The heaviest snowfall of the year, nine inches on the level, is reported at Chatham and at the other Cape towns. The snowfall commenced at 10 o'clock Sunday morning and ended early today.

CHAMPION GIRL SKATER A HUB SOCIETY MISS

Friends of Miss Theresa Weld, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Winsor Weld of Chestnut Hill, and prominent in the younger society set, congratulated her today on winning the women's skating championship of the International Union of America at New Haven.

Miss Weld is a member of the Skating Club of Boston. She had to do her best on the skates, for her friends, Miss Edith E. Storer of the Boston Club, ran her a close second. Both scored the same number of points in the prescribed figure skating. Miss Weld's victory was due to what the judges called a slight superiority in the free skating.

The pair skating championship, the first contest of the kind to be held in this country, was won by Miss Chevalier and Norman Scott of Montreal. Miss Weld and N. W. Niles of Boston took second place and Miss Crocker and E. M. Howland of Boston, third.

Trade Unionism Is Denounced by Eliot

BROCKTON, March 23.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, criticised trade unions, in an address on "Some of the Injurious Policies of Labor Unionism" before an audience of 1,500 persons in Clark Hall. The three policies which he claimed were injurious to members were the uniform wage system, the limited output of the individual workman and the surrender of individual liberties. He declared that a young man, under the uniform wage system, had no incentive for forging ahead.

Hale Relinquishes Control of Journal

Matthew Hale has relinquished control of the Boston Journal to Walton A. Green, Frederick W. Enwright and Dr. Hugh Cabot, according to announcement made today. Mr. Hale declares he has taken this course in order to give his time to the development of the Progressive party.

BOER WAR LESSON IN THE ULSTER CRISIS

FIRM ACTION TO STOP DISGRACE OF MUTINY

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

"Why are those English officers resigning?" asked the astounded American citizen on the street. England is at this moment poised rather dangerously on the edge of a volcano. If her ministers—who are her actual rulers—do not act quickly, strongly, resolutely, the whole fabric of English government, the work of a thousand years, may lose balance and topple over into the crater.

The bitter, costly lessons of the Boer war have been thrown away on the gentlemen—using the term in its strict social application—who hold commissions in the army of Great Britain.

That war between 40,000 Dutch farmers, destitute of a regular army, and, of course, without a navy, made England pay a price that not only staggered humanity" but almost took from her brow all the military glory and prestige which she had won in her wars with Napoleon.

The utter rottenness of the whole military system of Great Britain was unmasked to an astounded world by that war in the Transvaal. And then, finally, the Boers were defeated by sheer weight of numbers and the troops came home, many of the so-called "officers" were received with cold severity and bitterness of disappointment by those of the British people, whose intelligent eyes had been watching the whole pitiable exhibition or military incompetence, as it was displayed in South Africa.

FLAYED BY KIPLING.

The strongest castigation those "officers" received came from the vitriolic pen of Rudyard Kipling, who, within the limits of his metred invective fired the "flannelled oofs" who knew more about lawn tennis and the game of cricket than of the important art of war which was supposed to be their life profession.

When the flood of disaster to the British troops was running at high torrent, after the battle of Tugela River, in which whole regiments of British were blown to fragments and England was in panic, Lord Roberts and Sir Herbert Kitchener, then commanded by King Edward VII. to proceed as fast as possible to the battlefield and change the fate of the ruined condition.

Lord Roberts was in England, and though he left in a few hours after he had received the royal command, he had an 8,000-mile voyage before him as he stepped on board the troopship at Plymouth.

Kitchener was in Malta at the time, and nearer to the scene of action. He immediately started west.

KITCHENER AMAZED.

What he saw on his arrival filled him with the hottest indignation. Every hotel and every club in the city was thronged by British officers, who were taking the time of their lives. Upstairs and downstairs in every hotel revelry reigned supreme. Champagne flowed like water. When the orbs stopped popping for the night, Scotch and Irish was on top without limit, glorious strumming the tunes of jigs from the London music halls and the glorious jamboree was the spirit of the hour.

Kitchener looked on in enraged amazement. He acted quickly.

Within twenty minutes every bulletin board in the hotels of Capetown bore this notice:

"First train for the front starts in an hour. First steamer for England starts this afternoon. Every British officer now in Capetown will take one or the other."

The name at the bottom of the bulletin was sufficient.

The trouble with the English "army" and those in authority will wake up to the reality when the news comes right home to them in London itself and when there is danger of a Ferrer Ilas Flying Column after Sir Castle, is that the commissions of the army are reserved exclusively to the aristocracy and the nobility.

ONLY "BLUE BLOOD" OFFICERS.

No ordinary citizen's son, be he endowed with the military gifts of a Hannibal or a Napoleon, can rise ever to a lieutenancy in the army of his country. His blood must be of the standard which admits to the drawing-rooms of Belgravia. The commissioned officers of Great Britain are all "in society." If a man is in that charmed and exclusive circle, he had better stay out of the army.

Once in a while, during a war or in some campaign against the savage natives of Zululand or the Soudan, a young soldier of the line displays such bravery and brilliancy on the battlefield that the commanding officer must promote grade after grade till, perhaps, on the scene of action he may rise to be a commander of a corps. But, if he is wise, he will forget all about that standing when the war is over. He had better remember his commonplace ancestory or he will be ill at ease at every officers' mess, when he dares to sit at the table.

CASE OF SCOTCHMAN.

A striking instance of this arose in the case of a gallant and able young Scotchman who was on the administration of both Roberts and Kitchener on the battlefields of the Boer campaign.

So brilliant was this young soldier, so full of brains was his head, so cool and resourceful was he in emergency, so like lightning was his unerring judgment in moments that called for quick action, that his generals were compelled to promote him again and again until at the close of the war he held the rank of brigadier-general.

His remuneration was cost him dearly when he found himself again at Aldershot. Such office grade was his from the first moment he dared to associate with the titled and monpeace of the realm and protecting life and property.

What a laugh there is rippling through the War offices of Paris, Berlin, Venice, St. Petersburg or Rome at this grand exhibition of military loyalty to the oath of office, the solemnity of an officer's oath!

Those are brave fellows, those regulars. If it were to arrest at an eviction of a hundred poor families from their farms in Galway, or Mayo, or Kerry, or Cork, how they would strut through the streets at the head of their troops, as they marched to the scene of action.

PROUD AT EVICTIONS.

I have seen half a score of those monocled officers in charge of whole regiments overawing the peasantry in the days of the Land League, and instead of being ashamed of their painful jobs, as they saw the landlords' bailiffs set fire to the roofs of the little cottages while snow lay inches deep upon the ground, they were as proud as peacocks of their duty as they led their troops from farm to farm with all the pompous airs of a Caesar.

It may be that the present government has backbone enough to treat those military revolters as they deserve, as they would be treated by any decent respecting war department in the world. Imagine a United States officer, regular or militia, throwing down his sword because the President of the United States had a policy in Mexico or anywhere else with which he did not agree!

The War Department in London, the Horse Guards, as it is called, has a very plain duty. It may be that War Secretary Seely, by and with the advice and approval of Premier Asquith and the King, may decide that the time has come for promoting a couple of hundred first sergeants, etc., to the rank and duty as soldiers, to rank as commissioned officers in the army of England.

My! but what a shudder and shivering of misery there would be as the new officers, "up from the beastly ranks, you know," first took their seats at mess table.

WHOLE LAST LETTER.

Before he took his life he had written a lengthy letter, the contents of which was said, I think by Henry Labouchere, the editor of Truth, to be of such a nature that it should lead to the court-martialling and dishonorable discharge of half the officers in the British army. The War Office took charge of the letter. Needless to say it was buried in a pigeonhole, or, better still, carefully destroyed.

The "officers" who were responsible for the tragedy are of the same stripe as those who are disgracing the English army today by throwing in their commissions and refusing to obey unless they have their own orders, to do duty in Belfast in preserving the peace of the realm and protecting life and property.

soled "flannelled oofs" (whatever that may mean), as Kipling dubbed them scornfully in his famous poem of chastisement.

The social ostracism of this brave young Scottish officer grew so unbearable that the end—and the end came quickly—he went over to Paris one night, locked himself in his hotel room, and blew out his brains.

PRELATE REPORTS ARMY DISAFFECTION

LONDON, March 23.—The visit of the Archbishop of Canterbury to Premier Asquith has excited much speculation. It is declared he conveyed reports he had received from army chaplains stationed in Dublin and the Curragh of Kildare regarding the feeling among the officers and has been stationed there to confront the Fisteries.

Premier Asquith's statement, issued many important conferences in the past few days, and expected they will combine to offer an early general election, probably in July, on questions that the Unionists will cooperate in passing the Plural Voting, Home Rule and Welsh Disestablishment bills at this session of Parliament.

Premier Asquith is not to be coerced by the resignations of a few militaristic army officers. The AMERICAN correspondent has the most authority for saying that Colonel Seely, War Minister, will make a most important statement concerning the resignations in the House of Commons.

The report that great quantities of cartridges and small arms had been stolen from the Curragh magazine is discredited by the War Office.

In order to be in close touch with the Ministers during the crisis the Premier has changed his plans for the week-end. The King and Queen were to visit the Earl and Countess of Crewe at Liverpool from Saturday to Monday, but remained in London.

Their Majesties will carry out their projected visit to Chester Wednesday, but will return to London on the following Thursday morning. They will remain in town during the rest of the week.

The King and Queen also cancelled their proposed visits to the races on Thursday and to the Grand National race on Friday.

Seven hundred Ulster volunteers attended a church parade at the cathedral at Armagh. Before proceeding to the cathedral the Lord Primate of Ireland exhorted the volunteers to bear themselves quietly and not by word or deed provoke company those who differed from them, even though those men wished to throw Ireland back into the slough of despond.

ARMY RESIGNATIONS CALLED "MISTAKE"

LONDON, March 23.—The resignations of English Army officers have reached such proportions that the government, in refusing to accept them, will announce that it was "all a mistake," and that the officers got an entirely wrong intention of the government's purpose.

The decision of the cavalry officers at Curragh to resign rather than take up arms against Ulster is now officially admitted and the resignations have been accepted by the War Office. It is stated that between seventy and two hundred officers are affected.

The movement has spread to Aldershot and other military centres, and it is believed that if the government should persist in its course a great majority of the officers holding import ant positions in the army will resign.

ONLY ACCEPTED TWO.

What appears to be a reliable account of the defection of the officers at Curragh comes from Dublin. On Friday morning the officers received notification from the War Office that unless they were prepared for active service in Ulster under certain contingencies they should send in their papers within twelve hours. As a result of this notification many officers, including Lord Holm Patrick, resigned.

General Sir Arthur Paget then communicated with the War Office and subsequently had a conference with the Curragh officers. General Paget told them that the War Office was willing to accept the resignations of General Gough, of the Third Cavalry Brigade, and the senior officer of his staff, Major Kearsley, but that the others would be individually liable for their refusal to serve, which meant that they might be court-martialled.

General Gough and Major Kearsley declined to accept the offer of special treatment, and said they would stand or fall by their brother officers.

General Paget gave assurance that the movement of troops to Ulster was intended merely for the protection of government property, and on this assurance the officers eventually agreed to proceed to Ulster for police duty, but resolutely refused to undertake hostilities against the Ulster loyalists.

This decision was forwarded in a special message to London, and General Gough and the colonels of the other regiments were summoned by the War Office to proceed to London.

General Gough's brother also has resigned his commission. He is General Sir E. Gough, chief of staff in the Aldershot command.

GOUGH AT WAR OFFICE.

General Gough and his brother officers, including Colonel Hogg, from the Curragh, arrived here today and called at the War Office. Colonel Hogg subsequently went to the Admiralty House with Mr. Winston Churchill, who, when he was in the army, served in Colonel Hogg's regiment.

Lord Charles Beresford, a strong advocate of the Ulster cause, in a letter to the press says:

"I know for a fact that many naval officers, including those of high rank and some of the best service we possess, will resign their commissions if ordered to take part in the coercion of Ulster, or even if the army alone is utilized for that purpose."

Lord Charles contends that the argument that the officers, many of who refuse to coerce Ulster might refuse in the future to participate in the scrapping of ships not to hold good, there being no comparison, he says, between civil war and active service.

A letter also is published from the Marquis of Tullibardine, the Duke of Atholl's heir apparent, in the army, who claims the liberty of citizens for every man in the army, he declares, "this abominable policy is to be pressed home, we must be prepared to see wholesale resignations of officers and serious trouble in our ranks."

The Prime Minister in an interview with the Times made three important statements of fact, all of a reassuring character:

PURELY "PRECAUTIONARY."

First—That the movement of the troops in Ireland are purely precautionary, are intended chiefly for the due protection of military arms and stores and are not to be construed as a prelude to the use of force against the covenanters.

Second—That no warrants have been issued against the Ulster leaders, nor are warrants in contemplation.

Third—That the government does not contemplate an invasion, nor has the intention of the officers in the event of their being asked to take up arms against Ulster.

Mr. Asquith outlined to make a statement regarding the officers immediately after the Easter holidays stood, however, that the view taken by the ministers is that there has been an honest misunderstanding concerning the nature and duties the officers were asked to perform.

The official version is that the matter has been handled from the first by General Gough and his brother officers erroneously received the impression that the drilling plans of them against Ulster at once. The inference is that the intention is to eliminate them without further question and to attribute the whole business to a blunder.

The Archbishop of Canterbury conferred for two hours with Premier Mr. Asquith, at his residence, No. 10 Downing street, yesterday. Immediately after the conference drove away the Prime Minister went in his automobile to Buckingham Palace, where for more than an hour he had an audience with King George.

Sir John French, Field Marshal, also had an interview with the King and subsequently Mr. Churchill, first Lord of the Admiralty, and Mr. Asquith met for the second time in the day.

There was no Sunday rest for the Ministers. They passed most of the day in secret conferences at the Premier's residence. Mr. Churchill was with Mr. Asquith as early as 9 o'clock in the morning. A little later Mr. Churchill left by motor car and hastened to the War Office. He met Colonel J. E. B. Seely, the War Secretary, pursuing out into a long and earnest talk in deserted Downing Street. Then Mr. Churchill hurried back alone to Downing street, where the Premier had been joined by the Home Secretary for Ireland. A long conference followed. Mr. Asquith's callers evidently stopping for luncheon.

MANY GROWING RESTLESS.

General Gough's refusal to march against Ulster is proving increasingly and hosts of other persons occupying important positions in the army, and even men in the rank and file, are continually growing more and more restless.

So the army is threatened with a split from which it may take years to recover. The story of the disaffection in the British army at the time of the American War of Independence, when the great army leaders refused to fight against the colonists, is being repeated.

Sir Edward Carson and his lieutenants have seemingly well answered in holding the more fiery spirits in check. The cancellation of the threatened Nationalist procession at Londonderry city doubtless greatly helped matters.

There was no evidence yesterday of any Irish or back-down on the part of the Irish loyalists, and reports were current this afternoon that several officers in important Ulster military districts had sent in their resignations papers.

ARMY RESIGNATIONS A POLITICAL "TRICK"

LONDON, March 23.—The resignations of army officers in Ireland were not, as has been made to appear, horrified protests against the necessity of hearing arms against their countrymen. Instead, these resignations were simply a clever political move to embarrass the ministry in its determination to secure home rule.

This is the point blank statement of unbiased observers here; and Liberals insist this later version of affairs is the correct one.

The situation in England is somewhat different from that in the United States. In the United States army, the officers have come through West Point, but for the rest they are much the same sort of people as privates, in the origins and in their manners of life and of thought. It is not at all impossible for brother officers were asked to perform.

The official version is that the matter has been handled from the first by General Gough and his brother officers erroneously received the impression that the drilling plans of them against Ulster at once. A party of royal engineers arrived at Holywood, but no extra troops reached Belfast during the day.

Mr. Joseph Devlin addressed an Irish demonstration at Glasgow yesterday afternoon, at which he said that Sir Edward Carson had constituted himself the high priest of anarchy in Ireland and elsewhere. He had tried to bully the Crown, browbeat Parliament, blackmail the Cabinet and corrupt the army.

The Times says there is reason to hope that the crisis has been arrested. It censures Mr. Winston Churchill and Mr. Lloyd George for the malodrom speeches which have exasperated the north of Ireland and urges Mr. Asquith to restrain the "truculence" of his political lieutenants and the reassuring assurances of his chief military advisers.

CANADIAN UNIONISTS TO SEND MONEY AND MEN TO AID ULSTER

VANCOUVER, B. C., March 23.—In the event of Ulster hostilities, the local Unionist Club of Ireland will, it was announced, carry out arrangements that have been made to send 500 former members of the British army and navy in territorial forces and mercantile marine to Ireland to aid the Carson forces in their fight against home rule.

The club is an organization which purposes to afford aid to the Ulstermen from the over-seas dominions.

Prayers in the churches to avert war were said.

REAL STORY OF THE ORANGE UPRISING

By FRANCIS McCOLLAUGH,
Famous War Correspondent.

BELFAST, Ireland, March 23.—The Ulster question has become an amazing and alarming muddle which would be the worthier of Mexico than of England. Its outcome is known to no man, and it is bluff that may soon lead to bloodshed. In fact, I do not think bloodshed can be avoided in this deluded back country. The Orangemen are worked up to such a white heat by Sir Edward Carson, Bonar Law and other great English-Irish landlords, including the Catholic Duke of Norfolk, that bloodletting seems the only way to reduce their temperature.

Probably the whole thing will end sordidly in riots and drunkenness, the burning of Catholic houses and the kicking to death of Catholic workmen in Belfast. However, there are still some Orangemen alive and blusterous today who will be quiet enough this day next month.

CARSON IN ROLE OF MARTYR.

Sir Edward Carson, a politician on the make to start with, is now swelled with egotism owing to the presentations of swords of honor and canticles from primrose dames, and bouquets from duchesses, and he has been so often hailed in advance as a martyr that now he must live up to it, and he probably feels uncomfortable.

As for the Orange gang, they have been treated with a gentleness that would never be accorded the Irish Nationalists if they armed and drilled to intimidate a Tory government from passing a coercion act.

Winston Churchill declared last Saturday that there was one law here for Orange and Green, but that is not so. The Orangemen are the pets of the Liberal government. As a matter of fact the Orangemen is an obstruction to the machinery that must be gotten rid of if the legislative systems of the United Kingdom are to perform their functions properly.

If peace is to be made between England and the Irish in America, the shadow of a few hundred of those bumptious and bigoted bullies would rise in the way when when the Irish Parliament is in good working order it should consider some method for paying them well and Ireland and thus getting rid of them.

WORTHY OF SUFFRAGETTES.

The Times says there is reason to hope that the crisis has been arrested. It censures Mr. Winston Churchill and Mr. Lloyd George for the malodrom speeches which have exasperated the north of Ireland and urges Mr. Asquith to restrain the "truculence" of his political lieutenants and the reassuring assurances of his chief military advisers.

The Times says there is reason to hope that the crisis has been arrested. It censures Mr. Winston

ATTEMPT TO DICTATE.

The stories of wholesale resignations of army officers appear to have narrowed down to General Gough and a few cavalry officers.

The situation is compared to that created by the Dreyfus affair in France.

"For the first time in modern English history," says the Daily Chronicle, "a military cabal seeks to dictate to the government the bills it should carry or not carry into law. We are confronted with a desperate rally of reactionaries to defeat the democratic movement and repeal the Parliament act.

"This move by a few aristocratic officers in the last throw in the game. Liberalism has no quarrel with army officers, but it will not brook the dictation of a military caste. The Curragh incidents will give a powerful stimulus to the movement for democratizing the army. That, at any rate, will be so much to the good."

PRAISE BY TORY PRESS.

Carson began making inflammatory speeches and raising the army of Ulstermen, whereupon the Tory press exclaims: "It is wonderful how Sir Edward Carson is keeping the peace and holding back those regrettable Ulstermen," but there is not a word of praise for the Catholics who will make up nearly one-half of the population of that province.

Whenever the government moves a few troops in Ulster today to protect some lives and property, there is a positive roar of indignation from the Tory press. The sedate Times says that if the soldiers fire a single shot at the Orangemen "their careers will come to an end in a cloud of infamy."

The Telegraph says that if the soldiers fire it will be "murder on a large scale."

In other words, the Orangemen can fire on the soldiers as much as they like, but it will be criminal for the soldiers to shoot back. This reasoning is on a par with that of the suffragettes who mutilate works of art and then say it is monstrous for women to be imprisoned for so doing.

Lord Roberts says it is unthinkable to send an army against the Orangemen, who are patronized and led on by Lords Charlemont, Abercorn and Londonderry and other distinguished persons. But Lord Roberts would not say it was unthinkable to send an army against striking miners who are led by common people not under the patronage of dukes and lords.

Bonar Law mildly intimates in Parliament that perhaps officers won't like to fight Ulstermen for political reasons, and he looks aghast when Asquith answers that officers must obey.

CALLS IT INSULT TO PUBLIC.

There has been a campaign of falsehood in the Tory press which beats hollow anything I have ever seen among the Black Hundred newspapers of Russia, and it is the worst insult ever offered to the British public to put such stuff before a reader. It is as much as to say, "I think you are a congenital idiot."

Most astounding falsehoods are daily printed about military efficiency overwhelming numbers of those deluded farmers without artillery, horses or ammunition. The Times military correspondent sends wild whirling messages wherein he actually has the effrontery to draw a parallel between Orangemen and the revolting American aristocrats.

WASHINGTON AS EXAMPLE.

Sir Edward Carson has just as much chance of success as George Washington. Lord Northcliffe's innumerable papers send up excruciating cries of agony, alarm and horror at the very idea of the government invading the sacred soil of Ulster, so that now all Europe is aghast and the correspondents are crowding in from the Continent.

The object of all this is to scare the Liberals and to scare the King to create a suitable atmosphere for coup d'etat, such as the Lords killing of the annual army bill or the King exercising the power of veto.

Now I shall brush aside all this falsehood and tell the readers of the Boston AMERICAN the real situation.

First, I might remark, that although a Home Ruler, I was born in Ulster and am descended from one of those who fought the Battle of the Boyne by James the First.

In Ulster there are 25,000 real Orange fanatics, armed with half a dozen different kinds of rifles, for which they have a superstitious dread got the wrong ammunition.

There are 82,000 Covenanters in all, exactly 57,000 of these will make a wild bolt for it as soon as the first shrapnel shell bursts anywhere near them.

The fanatics may stand their ground, but they will be rounded up and forced to surrender before they can use their red coats.

I have been in many wars and am a professional war correspondent; this is my opinion and it will happen if it comes to fighting, which is doubtful. Besides, the Orange legions are scattered from Larne to Lough Erne. How can they unite? They live among Nationalists who know where their arms are hidden and will betray all their movements.

KING AND WAR CHIEFS CONFER ON ULSTER

SEND THIRD WARSHIP TO IRELAND

Bonar Law, the Unionist leader, who was most persistent in his attacks.

Movement of government troops in Ireland ended. Premier Asquith made this announcement this afternoon in moving the adjournment of Parliament. Before the Premier addressed the House Opposition Leader Law had made a fiery speech.

BITTER ATTACK BY LAW.

While he had the floor Mr. Law read a letter from General Sir Arthur Paget, commander-in-chief in Ireland, in which that officer declared that "if active operations were started by the government all Ireland would be ablaze by Saturday."

"The danger of the army being deserted completely surprised the government," declared the opposition leader. "As it is now it is a question whether the army now but a clear declaration that officers of the army and navy will not be compelled to serve against their will is not to be entirely to out. The government is entirely to blame for this crisis by trying to coerce a part of the United Kingdom without proper authority from the electorate."

In explaining the military disaffection, Premier Asquith said:

"Officers were informed last December that they might be called upon to assist the civil authorities in Ireland. At the same time notice was given that officers whose homes were in the affected area would be free to resign their commissions exempt from duty. No information was received that the government had intended to coerce Ulster."

Aggressive opposition was manifested the officers who resigned now realized the made a mistake. General Paget, though, commander of the Third Cavalry brigade, on his own request has been reinstated, said Mr. Asquith. General Gough resigned Saturday.

OFFICERS SUMMONED.

Tension over the Ulster situation was materially relieved today by Premier Asquith's official announcement that the movement of troops in the north of Ireland was merely a precautionary measure, but an inquiry conducted by Secretary of War Seely at the War Office indicated that a crisis had developed over the resignation of army officers rather than their action in any campaign against the foes of home rule.

Several of the officers arrived here early today in response to orders from the War Office. They included Brigadier-General J. E. Gough and Colonel Parker. The recalcitrant officers were sharply questioned at a secret session at the War Office, in which Secretary Seely, members of the Army Council, Field Marshal French and General Nugel, commander of the Irish garrisons, participated.

Immediately after the War Office inquiry ended Premier Asquith called a meeting of the Cabinet at his home. When Secretary Seely and Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, arrived there, each carried a large package of documents. Both were serious, looking neither to the right nor to the left as they hurried into Asquith's home.

Shortly after the Cabinet's meeting began a messenger arrived from King George, asking for the latest official news from Ulster. He was kept waiting for some time before Asquith could leave the meeting.

CONFERS WITH THE KING.

After the Cabinet meeting Secretary of War Seely again went to Buckingham Palace. This was his fourth conference with the King in three days. General Paget also went to the palace at noon, but was there only a short time.

There was no diminution in activity at the War Office and the Admiralty. Scores of dispatches were received at both places and were eagerly scanned by officials, almost worn out by their duties of the last three days. The most important were put aside for perusal by Secretary Seely and Lord of the Admiralty Churchill. One of these received at the Admiralty announced that the torpedo destroyer Fire Drake had sailed from Liverpool for Kingstown, Ireland, after taking on fuel. This is the third destroyer sent to Ireland since the Ulster situation became acute. The Fire Drake is believed to carry soldiers.

CROWDS AT ASQUITH'S HOME.

While the Cabinet was in session a great throng gathered about Asquith's home in Downing street. A feeling of solemnity seemed to awe the crowd when the ministers arrived and departed, there being a complete absence of cheers such as has marked the termination of Cabinet sessions at other critical junctures.

That King George had forced Premier Asquith to issue his reassuring statement to the public was a report in general circulation in government circles today. It was a cause of much comment that before the King summoned Asquith to Buckingham Palace on Sunday the sovereign had conferred with several other officials, including Secretary Seely and Winston Churchill. The King is known to rely mightily upon the wisdom and experience of Field Marshal Lord Roberts, who is a signer of the covenant that opposes coercion being used toward the people of Ulster.

Lord Roberts has been placed in a peculiar position by the Ulster crisis. When the covenant was first circulated in London he as well as many other British leaders signed the document, which reads as follows:

"I, earnestly convinced that the claims of the government to carry the home rule bill into law without submitting it to the judgment of the nation, is contrary to the spirit of our constitution, do hereby solemnly declare that if trouble comes I shall hold myself justified in taking or supporting any action that may be effective to prevent its being put in operation, and more particularly to prevent the armed force of the Crown being used to deprive the people of Ulster of their rights as citizens of the United Kingdom."

If Lord Roberts is called upon to lead the government troops in Ireland, he will be compelled to violate the covenant or request that another commander be chosen in his stead.

WAIT CALL OF CARSON TO BATTLE

By FREDERICK LESTER.
Staff Correspondent of the American.

BELFAST, March 23.—Although there is a lessening of military activity in and around Ulster Province today on the part of the Crown forces, agents of Sir Edward Carson, chief leader of the anti-home rule forces, were vigorously scouring the province, rallying the Ulster volunteers to the Unionist colors.

There was some relaxation of the tension, but it was admitted that the menace of civil war in Ireland over the home rule question is still as threatening as it was forty-eight hours ago.

At the military posts of the Orange forces guns, uniforms and ammunition were dealt out to the Carson volunteers, while retired army officers who have cast their lot with the Ulster forces drilled the men and instructed them in the tactics of war.

As a result of the government embargo the volunteers face an ammunition shortage if actual hostilities break out, but the leaders planned to overcome this by seizing government stores.

News that more officers in the imperial army had resigned rather than take the field against the Ulstermen caused rejoicing at Unionist headquarters. At Craigavon, the home of Captain James Craig, where Sir Edward Carson is directing the Ulster campaign, it was said that commissions would be given to all former army officers who sought to join the Ulster volunteers.

ULSTERITES READY TO FIRE.

Scores of agents reported to Sir Edward during the day. Aids who had spent the past twenty-four hours riding through the province in automobiles conferring with the Unionist captains declared that all was now in readiness.

If the crown forces fire the first shot the Ulster army is ready to launch its strength against the thousands of British troops in the province and on its southern borders at an hour's notice.

Sir Edward has notified his followers that he is prepared to take the field in person at the head of his troops if fighting begins.

All Ulstermen have been solemnly warned, however, that the aggressive must be taken by the government forces.

The streets of this city were filled with armed men today.

UNION JACK ON HOUSETOPS.

From hundreds of houses the Union Jack was flung, and at the Unionist headquarters an armed guard was drawn up in front and sentries patrolled adjacent streets.

An unusual circumstance attending the situation is the cordiality existing between the volunteers and the regulars who were sent here to subdue any uprising. On many occasions the Ulstermen and the British soldiers in passing each other in detachments have saluted. This evidences of friendship has given the army officers cause to suspect that hundreds of the soldiers sent into Ulster would refuse to fight against the volunteers.

The warning has been sounded by Lord Charles Beresford, that in the event of civil war in Ireland with Protestants pitted against the Roman Catholic inhabitants, warships sent to patrol or shell the northern coast would probably be turned over to the Ulstermen. Sentiment among many naval officers of high rank is strongly in favor of the Ulstermen, said Lord Beresford.

ORANGEMEN CALL MASS MEETING TO RAISE ULSTER FUND

MANCHESTER, Ct., March 23.—Anti-home rulers will hold a mass meeting in Orange Hall, Tuesday night, under the auspices of Loyal Orange Lodge, to raise funds to be sent to Ulster. Some fear was expressed here today that the meeting might develop trouble with those who are not sympathetic with the Ulstermen.

Urges Night School for Cambridge Adults

"The Legislature should pass a law to prevent untrained persons from selling eyeglasses over a counter to those who wish to buy them," declared Dr. Charles H. Williams, in speaking on "Spectacles and Eyeglasses: Their Use and Abuse," at the Harvard Medical School.

BOSTON IRISHMEN ARE ASKED TO BE NEUTRAL

The lines were called upon to remain neutral in the Ulster uprising by speakers at meetings of the Michael Davitt branch of the United Irish League of America and of the County Cavan Club.

Said President Peter Mahan of the Michael Davitt Branch:

"It is not at the present time the Irish people fighting the Irish. It is the English people fighting themselves. That is what they have always tried to get us to do. Those times have gone by, and owing to the able leadership of John E. Redmond he has got them so that they are fighting among themselves. I believe the funds are furnished and the fires of dissension lighted by the Tories of England. The time has come and I believe that it will be only a question of a couple of months when we will have home rule in Ireland.

"We have always been known as the 'fighting race.' There has never been a country that has obtained freedom without fighting for it, but the time has come when Ireland will obtain its freedom without the loss of a drop of blood."

Vice President George H. Boyle said:

"The Orangemen are putting up a bluff at war. Look at Armagh and Belfast when they were parading in those places on the twelfth of July. They had to have nearly the whole police force of Ireland around them to protect them."

Vice President Connors of the Michael Cavan Club said:

"The fight is not now the fight of the Irish people; it is the fight of the English government. Several resignations in the army have been reported; but I believe that a loyal soldier is true to his flag. We have nothing against the English people. We count them and find them large-hearted men. For my part I say, let us bury the hatchet, let bygones be bygones. For the first time Irishmen can stand back and let others do the fighting."

RIVERS AND HARBORS BILL DEBATE MAY DELAY TOLLS ACTION

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Administration supporters in the House today struggled with a legislative situation that threatened to delay the opening of the fight for the repeal of the free Panama Canal tolls until Thursday or Friday, despite the desire of the White House for speedy action on the bill.

Friends of President Wilson declared the exhausted discussion of every paragraph of the Rivers and Harbors bill a filibuster to delay the taking up of the repeal measure in the hope that some of the less ardent advocates of the repeal may be won over by the opponents of the President.

Representative Underwood and his associates in the free tolls camp denied any intention to cause delay. To a complaint by Representative Sims of Tennessee against the length of time taken in general debate on Rivers and Harbors bill the free tolls advocates replied that the administration forces were fearful of delay because Congress was "hearing from home."

The prospect was, however, that the Rivers and Harbors bill would be disposed of tomorrow, provided the District of Columbia legislation regularly before the House on the calendar was set aside. If the rivers bill consumes all of tomorrow, the repeal measure must wait until Thursday, as Wednesday is reserved for committee measures.

Lord Camoys Denies Pre-Nuptial Pact

LONDON, March 23.—Lord Camoys, when seen at his ancestral home in Stonerpark today by the AMERICAN correspondent, said:

"I shall have to speak for Lady Camoys, as she is slightly indisposed. The news of what purported to be her pre-nuptial agreement as published in AMERICAN, came as a decided surprise to us. We have cabled to Providence to find out who was responsible for the filing of this supposed agreement. Anything of the account published in the papers was entirely wrong."

When asked to supply the correct version, Lord Camoys said: "No, that is a private matter entirely and we do not intend just because an incorrect report was published to rush and give out to all the world a story that concerns our family alone."

Drops Unconscious After Ferryboat Fall

Arthur Matthews, twenty-seven, of No. 35 School street, Lynn, fell unconscious as he stepped off the ferryboat Neptune Island, from Saint Boston. He said he had fallen off a Chelsea ferryboat and was rescued in getting ashore by swimming and climbing up the piling of the wharf.

CARSON SEES "FIT OF PANIC" IN ACTION OF BRITISH TROOPS

BELFAST, March 23.—The most striking outward signs of conflict were the utterances of some pastors of Presbyterian churches, especially in the church at Belmont, near Craigavon, the headquarters of the "Ulster provisional government," where the preacher talked of the "reptile venom which is abroad in the land." He also referred to the Scottish Covenanters "who overcame the King's soldiers."

The war correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung, who understands English and was present at this service, said afterward: "If this had been Berlin a police lieutenant would have just stood up and that would have been the end of that sermon."

Sir Edward Carson, who was among the congregation, refused to comment on the sermon or talk on the situation, but incessant calls on his telephone later in the day elicited this statement:

"The conclusion that I draw from the government's action in sending troops is that after a fit of panic they have made up their minds to attempt to do two things, to intimidate and provoke and to thrill and wail."

A BUSY SPRING SEASON

is on the way. The sure indicator is the great increase in the "Help Wanted" ads every day in the AMERICAN, the market place for efficient workers.

SIR ROBERT PERKS SAYS TROOPS WON'T FIRE ON COUNTRYMEN

NEW YORK, March 23.—"An order to shoot down Protestants in the North of Ireland would seal the fate of any government," said Sir Robert William Perks, a British financier and railroad constructor and former member of Parliament, who has reached New York. "I do not believe the soldiers could be relied upon to fire upon their own countrymen. It is only recently that Mr. Asquith has realized that the men of Ulster would fight sooner than have home rule, and I do not believe he ever intended to enforce the bill by coercive measures."

Captain J. R. Beresford, late of the Eighth (Inniskill) Hussars, now stationed at Leeds, spoke freely at the Imperial, where he has been staying for several weeks.

"The situation in Ulster," he said, "is a very serious proposition, for there is much complication, what with the Covenanters, Irish volunteers (Redmond's army), loyal British regiments, who will never desert the British throne, and regiments of the south of Ireland, such as the Munster Fusiliers, Cork Rifles, and other troops, who are composed chiefly of southern Irish, Scotch and Welsh soldiers, who are only Englicals, that unless a great climb-down by the Liberal government takes place Britain will again have to undergo another incident similar to the conflict between Roundheads and Cavaliers. But the result will differ a great deal, for the whole of the English regiments are almost to a man Tories, especially the cavalry and artillery. In fact 99 per cent. of the generals—and the same statement applies to the navy—are Tories out and out. In fact, it would be hard to find a dozen Radicals even among the able seamen on a ship."

Sir Gilbert Parker's
Great New Novel
"You Never Know Your Luck"
Published Complete in the April Munsey

WHEN this novel goes into book form after it has appeared in The Munsey, it will cost you $1.50; in Munsey's Magazine it will cost you 15 cents, and in The Munsey you get it first.

Sir Gilbert Parker is unquestionably one of the first novelists of the day, and one of the most popular. His books, at $1.50 a copy, sell up into the hundreds of thousands—some of them as much as 400,000. With so tremendous a sale at $1.50, what ought the sale to be at only 15 cents? Four million copies, I should say, but as the edition of Munsey's Magazine for April is limited to 500,000 copies, there will be, on this theory, 3,500,000 disappointed persons.

If, therefore, you want to make sure of this new Parker novel at a cost of 15 cents, you would do well to get busy with your newsdealer before his supply of the April Munsey is exhausted.

SIR GILBERT PARKER
Author of "The Right of Way," "The Money Master," "Seats of the Mighty," "The Judgment House."

MUNSEY

with a full book-length novel published complete each issue, has hit a new high place in magazine making. I have been studying for a dozen or fifteen years to find a way to give the public brand-new, high-grade books at a price not to exceed 25 cents a copy. I have just now solved the problem through publishing them in my magazine—not serial publication, but as complete as if actually in book form. And in The Munsey they are printed on fine book paper, from large, clear type, and are profusely illustrated.

The Munsey is jam full of good stuff. Its complete novel covers only one side of it. The other side is rich in illustrations, worth-while articles, short fiction and other material—a magazine practically double the size of the average magazine.

ARGENTINE BEEF MARKET RULED BY U.S. PACKERS

The story of how the Chicago meat barons have captured the Argentine beef trade and nullified any effects of the reduced tariff is told with authority in a "Farmers' Bulletin" just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

In this bulletin it is pointed out that Chicago packers have grabbed a large percentage of the meat-packing trade of Argentina. They ship the meat to themselves in New York or Chicago and as the Bulletin crisply remarks:

"It is not assumed that they are using Argentine beef to beat down the prices of Chicago beef."

The Argentine beef totals one per cent. of the United States national supply. But it so far sobs the British market of beef that prices in London are steady with a tendency to rise. Thus the Chicago men "get it going and coming." The report says:

"At the present time there are nine establishments for slaughtering, chilling or freezing and exporting beef located in or near Buenos Aires and five of these companies are owned or operated by Chicago slaughtering and packing houses. These five do by far the major portion of the business."

Special Matinee of 'Within the Law' for Boston's Blind

An event for the sightless of Boston and vicinity will be the special matinee performance of "Within the Law" at the Majestic Theatre Tuesday afternoon, March 31, given exclusively for blind people. This is done through the kindness of Selwyn & Company, producers of the play, the Wilber-Schubert company of the Majestic Theatre and Jane Cowl and all the other members of the company, who have volunteered their services.

President Allen of the Perkins Institution for the Blind and Miss Lucy Wright of the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind are aiding in the plans.

The Perkins Institution has printed in raised letters for blind reading the invitations, which provide seats for not only the person receiving them, but for one or two attendants to accompany them. The audience will be an invitation one entirely.

$226,618,120 Taken in by the Railroads

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The total operating revenues of steam roads in the United States for last January, according to a statement today issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission, was $226,618,120, of which $154,674,165 was in freight revenue. The total operating expenses amounted to $175,067,091. The net operating revenue amounted to $51,551,029.

MISS CUDAHY 5 YEARS WINNING GOAL AS NURSE

Helen Cudahy, the Milwaukee heiress who is coming to the Massachusetts General Hospital to become a nurse, is the victor in a five-year struggle to win her mother's permission, dispatches to the AMERICAN today revealed.

In this contest she was backed by her father, who rose to be a millionaire packer from a poor boyhood. He is proud of her independence and father and daughter finally triumphed in the family councils.

Mrs. Cudahy steadfastly maintained that for a girl to put aside society and the enjoyment of riches to nurse the sick and unfortunate was only a "fad." She still holds this view and gave her consent to the Boston trip grudgingly.

"It is not true that a love affair is responsible for my plan," Miss Cudahy is quoted as saying. "I believe any girl, regardless of her family's wealth or position, should be able to earn her own living. Nursing appeals to me and though I may never work for pay, I propose to know how.

"I am not a suffragist. I merely realize that the world today requires more of us girls than it did of our mothers. I am not a new woman, only a modern one."

Bishop Fallows Backs Hearst in Cocaine War

CHICAGO, March 23.—"Not fines, but imprisonment at hard labor must be visited on those who traffic in cocaine and other habit-forming drugs," declared Bishop Samuel Fallows of St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal Church here.

"A campaign has been opend in our city," said the Bishop, "against the wrongs done the manhood, the womanhood and the childhood of Chicago by the dealers in baleful drugs. A nation-wide crusade must be carried on. Women's help should be freely given.

"We are deeply indebted to William Randolph Hearst, who thrust against the ravages of habit-forming drug and whiskey, the tremendously far-reaching influence of his magazines and newspapers, employing Dr. Wiley, Dr. Charles H. Paulkurst, Ella Wheeler Wilcox and other world-famous experts and moral uplifters. "A criminal drug ring is behind this abominable wholesale movement for the physical and moral depravation of both adults and little ones."

'De Luxe' Book Case Trial Is Delayed

The "De Luxe" books trial in the Superior Court today was delayed when Mrs. Alice N. Mayo of Watertown, N. Y., who, on Friday, testified she purchased books from Glen Farmer, failed to appear. A late train had delayed her return from Watertown. Expressmen told of delivering heavy packing cases to Mrs. Mary A. Rogers of Beacon street, who claims she paid $37,000 for books under a resale promise.

WALSH PLANS EXTRA MESSAGE ON NEW HAVEN

Governor Walsh declared today he would send a special message on the New Haven Railroad situation to the Legislature as soon as he had received official word of the agreement reached between the Department of Justice and the railroad representatives. He added:

"I have read of the completed agreement with great interest. As the Legislature is to be asked to remove the prohibition in the Boston Holding Company act, providing that the Boston & Maine Railroad stock cannot be disposed of, I do not care to make any comment on the matter until it comes before me officially. Then my views will first be presented to the Legislature."

The New Haven board is expected to meet in New York Thursday, when the agreement between the advisors of the road and the department will be considered.

Louis D. Brandeis said today:

"New England is to be congratulated on the happy outcome of the negotiations between the Department of Justice and the New Haven. The settlement now agreed upon will, if carried out, put an end forever to that monopoly on transportation from which Massachusetts particularly has suffered grievously near seven years.

"Railroad and steamship development long arrested may now be resumed, great properties and small fortunes may slowly recover from the ruthless sacrifice to which they were subjected and with honest observance of the law prosperity may be restored.

U. S. Dreadnought Oklahoma Christened by Indian Princess

CAMDEN, N. J., March 23.—Another great fighting machine was added to the United States Navy today, when the battleship Oklahoma was launched in the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company.

The Oklahoma is the biggest ship ever launched on the Delaware River. She is 583 feet long and her trial displacement will register 27,500 tons. The Oklahoma will carry ten fourteen-inch breech-loading guns, mounted in four turrets, with a secondary battery of twenty-one six-inch guns. She will also be equipped with four submerged twenty-one-inch torpedo tubes and ten guns for signalling.

The battleship was christened by Miss Lorena Cruce, daughter of Governor Cruce of Oklahoma. She is really an Indian princess, as her ancestors, on her mother's side, were high in the councils of the Chickasaw and Choctaw tribes.

Secretary McAdoo to Dine the Wilsons

WASHINGTON, March 23.—One of the most interesting dinners of the week will be that on Thursday night given by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Miss Nona McAdoo in honor of the President and Mrs. Wilson. Since the invitations were sent out the announcement of the engagement of the Secretary to Miss Wilson has created widespread interest.

BRAZIL TRIES TO GET NEWS OF ROOSEVELT

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 23.—Officials at every point that can be reached by telegraph were called upon by the government today to send the latest news they have in reference to Theodore Roosevelt and his party, who are reported to have met with an accident in the interior.

The first advices of the Roosevelt party's misfortune reached here from New York, the dispatches sent from there by Anthony Fiala, a member of Colonel Roosevelt's exploring expedition, being immediately transmitted to Rio de Janeiro.

Fiala's message caused deep concern at first, but after it had been scanned by government officials they declared their belief that none of the party had met with harm.

They based their assertions on the fact that Fiala merely announced, "We have lost everything in the rapids," and made no mention of injuries or casualties. It is believed that several days will elapse before the details of the accident reach civilization, as Fiala's message was sent from Santarem, a point about 500 miles from the coast.

The party should have no trouble in reaching the coast from Santarem, however, as that town is on the Tapajos river close to its junction with the Amazon. It is probable that a Brazilian gunboat will be sent from Para to render any aid that may be necessary. This vessel would have no difficulty in passing up the Amazon and meeting the Roosevelt party.

PRIMARY FIGHT FOR CURLEY'S SEAT HOLDS CENTRE OF STAGE

Until the primaries close tomorrow the centre of the political stage in this jurisdiction will be held by Daniel T. O'Connell, James A. Gallivan, Redmond S. Fitzgerald and William F. Hickey, the real contenders for the Democratic nomination in the Twelfth District Congressional contest. The election takes place two weeks from tomorrow.

One of Governor Walsh's immediate worries is just where to turn for a first class man to place on the State Board of Efficiency and Economy. Chairman John N. Cole goes out at the end of the week. Mr. Cole leaves behind him Francis N. Tyrrell of Chelsea, Democrat, who will undoubtedly be elected to the $5,000 chairmanship, and ex-officio Frank Pope of Leominster, the State auditor, also a Democrat.

According to the Walsh policy, therefore, the new man must be "somebody other than a Democrat."

* * *

The duties of a member of this particular board do not appeal to the average politician. Pointing out offices which should never have been created, recommending economy here and there in State institutions and on State boards, playing the watch-dog of the Commonwealth is NOT work that is likely to enhance one's personal popularity. The average politician, therefore, has no stomach for it.

* * *

And yet the work must be done.

Where to get just the man to do it.

Governor Walsh also has before him the five vacancies on the State Board of Labor and Industries.

* * *

His Excellency cannot afford to allow the work of the Labor and Industries Board to be continued much longer without a responsible directing head. The interests of too many people are involved. Governor Foss was at least slow in making the original appointments. The work, begun last September, was scarcely under way before Governor Walsh removed the entire board.

CRONIN AND PHONES.

The Walsh theory, as is now well known, is that there are too many State boards, and that in many cases they are expected to cover different parts of the same field. The Governor holds, for example, that the Industrial Accident Board and the Board of Labor and Industries should be consolidated.

* * *

This, of course, is theory. It may be good theory. Its accomplishment would require legislative action by a Republican Senate and a Republican House.

* * *

Evidence that the Legislature is about ready to settle down to business appeared today in a "Daily List of Committee Hearings," with only one committee designated for an open session. This was the Committee on Public Institutions.

* * *

Early arrivals at the State House today said they had heard that Morrison I. Swift would be along later, leading an "army" of the "unemployed." Politicians are quite universally of the opinion that there is today a lot of clever politics in the leadership of the "unemployed" in some of the larger cities of the country.

* * *

Representative William N. Cronin of South Boston says that once upon a time, when his people were out of town for the Summer, he called them twenty-two times by telephone from his Boston office.

* * *

The telephone company, Mr. Cronin says, presented him with a bill for "sixty-five or seventy calls." When he told them to go to court and get it, according to report, the matter was dropped.

* * *

Dropped, that is to say, by the telephone company. It was not dropped by William N. Cronin.

* * *

Representative Cronin is the author of a bill—public hearing on it at 10:30 tomorrow before the Committee on Mercantile Affairs—compelling the company to instal an automatic telephone register wherever there is measured telephone service.

* * *

Since the Cronin bill was filed, the telephone company has announced that it is ready to instal such registers at a cost of $3 per year to the subscriber. Mr. Cronin objects to the charge.

FOR BUSINESS BASIS.

The Committee on Constitutional Amendments was expected to report today on the petition of Benjamin B. Alling for the submission to the people of a proposed amendment prohibiting the appropriation of State funds for "sectarian" purposes.

* * *

Practically all the members of the unpaid boards of trustees in charge of the various State institutions, all their salaried under-officers, and many of the tradesmen who sell them institutional groceries, provisions and supplies, are lined up in a mass play against the "consolidation" plan of Governor Walsh and the Cole board.

* * *

This will be a battle to test the calibre of the Legislature. At first sight it would appear that the chances against the Governor's plan are 1,000 to 1.

* * *

The Governor cannot write his consolidation act into the statute books. He can only recommend and give the reasons for his recommendation. Then it is up to the lawmakers.

* * *

But the Governor CAN carry, to the people of Massachusetts next Fall, a statement of the wanton waste which today characterizes the administrative methods of Massachusetts. He can get a Legislature commissioned to aid him in the mighty task of putting these State institutions on a business basis.

* * *

Another anti-Walsh organization is that of the Representatives from some of the wealthier towns, united to fight the proposed tax reforms.

SOME "LARGE ORDERS."

Make no mistake about it. As committee hearings draw to a close, and the Legislature grapples with the serious business of the session, your Governor will be found with some "large orders" on his hands; not the least of them being his effort to straighten out the inequalities of the Massachusetts tax system and his campaign for a business management of the penal, correctional and charitable institutions of the State.

* * *

United States Senator Henry F. Hollis of New Hampshire, Harvard, '92, will speak at the Harvard Union tonight on "The Senate from a Senator's Viewpoint." At forty-five, Senator Hollis is one of the youngest of United States Senators. He is also one of the handsomest. As an orator he is excelled by not more than one or two in the country. And it would be extremely difficult to name the one or two.

O'Connell Promises to Fight Repeal Act

Speaking before audiences aggregating more than 4,500 voters of the Twelfth Congressional District, Daniel T. O'Connell, candidate for the Democratic nomination yesterday told of his intention to have all United States ships allowed the use of the Panama Canal without paying tolls.

He explained at length how the passage of the tolls bill would give a British interpretation to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and surrender for all time rights vitally affecting this nation fom a commercial, strategic and political standpoint.

O'Connell Sure of Victory, He Says

Daniel T. O'Connell of Dorchester, candidate for the Democratic nomination at the primary tomorrow, will close his campaign this evening with a whirlwind tour with speeches at twenty-five open-air rallies and concludes with a big reception at the Wanita, A. A. Club on George and Magazine streets in Ward 17. Mr. O'Connell is confident of winning tomorrow.

"I will win this fight by a majority of over 2,000 votes," he said.

Pneumonia Cured by New Blood Serum

NEW YORK, March 23.—As the result of experiments begun last Fall by physicians at the Rockefeller Institute, a new serum, which has proved successful in 90 out of every 100 pneumonia cases, has been cultivated and will soon be announced to the medical world. The serum is made from the blood of a horse into which have been injected pneumo-cocci germs. It brings about a crisis in from twelve to eighteen days.

LATE NEWS BY CABLE

Carl Hopf, Wholesale Poisoner, Is Executed.

FRANKFORT-ON-MAIN, Germany, March 23.—Carl Hopf, who was sentenced to death on January 17 for poisoning his wife, was executed today. Hopf, who was a druggist and chemist, had a wide knowledge of poisons and used this knowledge in his murderous operations. According to the authorities, he had poisoned four persons.

Double Aviation Tragedy.

BASLE, Switz., March 22.—A curious double tragedy resulted here today from an aviation fatality. A spectator at the aerodrome was overcome when Herr Berger, a German aviator, fell from a height of 1,200 feet while looping the loop, and dropped dead. Berger had nearly every bone in his body broken.

Patrolman Devine Buried with Honors

The funeral of Special Officer John M. Devine of Station 11, director of the Boston Social Club, the police organization, took place today from St. Peter's Church with a high mass of requiem. Rev. Michael Hannahy was the celebrant. The escort was a detail of sixteen patrolmen of Station 11, in charge of Sergeant Dennis Murphy. District Chief John Murphy and Captain Jordan represented the fire department.

Says Siegel Tried to Lure Him in

NEW YORK, March 23.—August Ahrett, who lost $21,156 in the collapse of the Siegel bank, makes the charge that a man purporting to be Henry Siegel tried to lure him into buying stock of the Siegel Stores Corporation. He says he received a letter signed "Siegel" which read: "It is confidently estimated that the profits of the three stores for the next five years will average each year over $1,200,000."

Society Bal Masque to Close the Season

A subscription dance "en costume" under the tutelage of Mrs. Agassiz, Mrs. Converse and Mrs. Councilman to close the season's list for the bulk of the Back Bay's exclusive set will take place at the Hotel Somerset the last of the week, and for smart and fantastic habiliments for the festival of it probably no masquerade of the Winter season will be able to equal it.

Laud Dedham Girls as Fire Fighters

Dedham firemen are today praising Miss Elizabeth Burgess, daughter of Theodore P. Burgess, the yachtsman, and Miss Frances Fairchild, daughter of Mrs. "Jack" Fairchild, for their assistance in fighting a fire in the home of Mr. Burgess. The two young girls grabbed a hose and kept the blaze from making headway until the firemen arrived.

WASHING WON'T RID HEAD OF DANDRUFF

Dissolve It, That's Best Way

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, put about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and dicking of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to preserve your hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair more quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everyone notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

BRIDE'S BODY IN CANAL, POLICE SAY SUICIDE

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 23.—Mystery surrounds the death of Mrs. Karzia Bidnyke, twenty, wife of Wasyl Bidnyke of No. 46 Vine street, whose body was found floating in the canal. She disappeared from home SIX weeks ago, but the fact was not reported to the police.

So far the police and Medical Examiner Watson, who viewed the body, have called the woman a suicide. Friends of the couple can give no reason for Mrs. Bidnyke taking her own life. The husband, when questioned by the police, denied there had ever been a family quarrel. He could give no reason why his wife should drown herself.

The police are making an investigation in hopes of finding out the reasons for her death. Mrs. Bidnyke was here nearly a year ago.

Aged Couple, Ruined by Rockefeller, Die

NEW YORK, March 23.—Hiram J. Colton, eighty-two, once a millionaire oil dealer, who defied Rockefeller in the fight and lost his all in a losing battle against the trust, was found dead by gas with his wife, eighty-one, in a rooming house in Bay Ridge. With his aged wife tottering at his side, Colton on Saturday applied for a room, saying he had no money, but expected some in a few days.

Removed Bullet With a Penknife

BUFFALO, March 23.—Lying in the hospital in a critical condition, sixteen year old Frankie Burden today told how he had removed a bullet from his leg with a penknife after he had been shot by a policeman last Friday night when caught robbing a store. He will probably die from blood poisoning.

Suffragist Banquet to Be Held Friday

The big suffragist banquet of the Political Equality Union, which was announced in yesterday's AMERICAN as scheduled for next Saturday, will take place next Friday evening in Ford Hall. The Saturday date was an error. George Creel, the Colorado publicist, will be the principal speaker.

MYSTERY IN EATONS' TRIP TO THE SOUTH

Mystery today surrounds the purpose of the Southern trip of Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, widow of Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton, of whose death she was cleared by a Plymouth County jury, and her two daughters, Mrs. June Ainsworth Keyes and Miss Dorothy Eaton.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Eaton announced her intention of giving up her residence here and going to live in the South. She refused to state before sailing whether or not she had completed her plans to this effect.

Miss Dorothy Eaton, who has been studying at Forest Hills, was accompanied by a young man who was recognized by some of the reporters who witnessed the sailing. He refused to divulge his identity.

None of the party would tell whether a return trip was contemplated.

King Smiles at Inebriate's Tirade

BERLIN, March 23.—King Ludwig of Bavaria was walking in the streets of Munich with one of his daughters, when a man, who had had too much beer accosted him and entered upon a discussion of "these damnable new taxes." When a policeman sought to rescue him, the King, smiling, said, "Let the man alone; he will not remember tomorrow what he did today."

Japanese Volcano Threatens Island

TOKIO, March 23.—A severe eruption of the volcano on Suwanose Island, south of Kyushu, is under way today. The flames are rising 500 feet above the mouth of the crater. An expedition has been sent to give relief to the 280 inhabitants of the island. The long extinct volcano Shohai, near Sakato, also is in eruption. This mountain is inhabited solely by fishermen.

New Anti-Jewish Order in Russia

ST. PETERSBURG, March 23.—A strong anti-Jewish bias is displayed by Minister of the Interior Maklakoff in a circular just issued to the governors of the various provinces. The circular directs that a special surveillance be instituted on all foreign Jews who have entered Russia without special permission.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE!

People Notice It. Drive Them Off With Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, the bowels and the liver with Olive Tablets, that's all. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are the successful substitute for calomel—there's never any sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a dark brown taste, a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, sick liver, bad complexion or muddy skin.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years in practice at first with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immediate effective result.

Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, O. All druggists.

MME. CAILLAUX COMPLAINS OF ILLNESS IN CELL

ing enacted in the prison, ex-Minister Caillaux was on the witness stand before the parliamentary committee investigating the Rochette scandal. He was questioned in regard to "Monsieur X.," the mysterious wire puller, who is said to have had the trial of Banker Henri Rochette postponed, but Caillaux denied any knowledge of such a man.

NEW CABINET UPHEAVAL.

A third cabinet upheaval is forecasted as a result of Caillaux's examination. Aristide Pariole in its issue today said that two ministers and one under secretary would be forced out of the Cabinet by the political revelations following the tragedy. They are Minister of Public Instruction Rene Viviani, Minister of Colonies Albert F. Lebrun, and Under Secretary of War Magninot, whose name was frequently mentioned in the scathing political articles written by Calmette against Caillaux and his friends.

All France today is clamoring for the name of the mysterious person who, according to evidence at the sitting of the Commission of Inquiry, has power to bend the government to his own will.

This unnamed wirepuller obtained the postponement of the trial of the swindling Rochette and so allowed him to engineer a Mexican loan and scrape his wallet. Public opinion holds that Rochette himself is the man who is today described as "Monsieur X," but this conjecture is not supported by actual fact.

The same element of mystery enraps this tragedy as in the notorious Steinheil case, which was never cleared up.

LOOMS LARGE IN BACKGROUND.

Then, as now, the shadow of a mysterious, all-powerful individual loomed large in the background; now then, a conspiracy of silence conceals his identity.

The Academician, Maurice Barrès, one of the less famous publicmen, leaps into the discussion with a powerful editorial in the Echo de Paris, headed "In the Sewer," in which he says:

"The apparition of Monsieur X is the dominant factor in the case. Monsieur X is undoubtedly Rochette himself, who has secured for his Mexican farm, where, I understand, he lives joyously with fifty braves, gun in hand, protecting his precious person and the treasure from French bookings which he has cleaned out, thanks to obliging Messieurs Monis and Caillaux."

THE FEMALE CAILLAUX.

A further examination of M. Briand and M. Barthou is awaited with the greatest expectancy. Meanwhile, "the female Caillaux," as she is now officially called even by the court usher who in former years obsequiously bowed her into her seat reserved for the judges' bench with other fashionable women during the Steinheil trial, maintains her haughty demeanor in the special suite set aside for her in St. Lazare jail.

The Figaro promises to produce witnesses to prove that Madame Caillaux, before shooting M. Calmette, carried at a target in the Champs Elysee quarter to insure the death of her victim.

A prominent schoolgirl figure in the case today is Germaine Claretie, thirteen-year-old daughter of Mme. Caillaux, who, in answer to queries concerning her mother's health, replied: "Give us your pity. My mother is very unhappy."

It was the daughter's first visit to Mme. Caillaux since the latter's arrest following the sensational shooting.

VISCOUNT ACCUSES WOMAN.

Viscount de Tresern is quoted as the accuser of Mme. Caillaux, declaring that he was in the shop of a gunmaker in the fashionable quarter on the afternoon of the shooting and that, while he did not actually see the woman practicing, he did see her coming up from the basement of the shop, near the range at a target range, with the pistol she had just bought.

Her hands were soiled, according to the Viscount, a circumstance affording the weapon, and she asked permission to wash them.

She was accompanied by a gentleman, the Viscount affirms, whose name he has not yet divulged.

There is much discussion over the outcome of the investigation by the committee of the Chamber of Deputies. M. Jaurez, the presiding officer, believes that the imminence of the elections will make impossible the submission of a detailed report. He favors the presentation to the chamber at the end of the week of general findings.

If the committee pronounces for impeachment, the findings will be sent to another committee, which will be charged with the preparations for the arraignment of the accused before the high court, the sole body competent to try Ministers or ex-Ministers.

As this would require much time, the opinion is generally held that the government will postpone the elections for a fortnight.

Charles W. Morse's Bank May Reopen

NEW YORK, March 23.—Wall street was surprised to learn today that there was a possibility that the National Bank of North America, in which Charles W. Morse was heavily interested and which failed in the panic of 1907, may resume business. One important contingent is the exact value of the bank's equity in the Wall Street Exchange Building.

The report of John W. McKinnon, agent for the shareholders, shows that the bank's equity to be $1,044,000. This is $1,000,000 less than the value placed upon the bank's stock by the real estate experts. If the higher valuation can be realized it will place the bank in position to reorganized and it can renew its charter. Mr. Morse refused to discuss the matter.

Sunshine Conference To Be Held April 4

City and town development will be the theme at the Massachusetts "Prosperity Conference" in Ford Hall, April 4. The conference is called by Governor Walsh.

MRS. BARRETT SAYS HUSBAND HAD 40 SUITS

Forty suits of clothes, shoes, linen and accessories to match, a nickel-plated hatchet and the jawbone of an Indian brave are among the startling matters which may figure as evidence when Mrs. Ella J. Barrett's divorce suit against Harry W. Barrett comes to trial, it was learned today.

Mrs. Barrett is wealthy; so is her husband. He is a Summer street wool merchant. Their romance began many years ago in a little town in Canada, and was revived when they met in Boston after a long separation.

Mrs. Barrett charges cruelty and intoxication. Barrett in reply has asserted that his wife was extravagant.

Mrs. Barrett in reply says he has a time. Sympathizers of his wife say he has been a "regular Beau Brummel for years," and that whatever he desires in the way of fine wearing apparel he got, regardless of cost. Mrs. Barrett claims to have made most of her own clothes and to have found solace in needle work.

DISCHARGES HIS FRIENDLY.

Mrs. Barrett says Barrett had a habit of discharging all the servants at once—cook, maids and chauffeur—and engaging a new retinue on the slightest pretext. She claims to have slept with her bedroom door locked for years, owing to continual threats. Interesting exhibits are likely to figure at the trial. Among them is a nickel-plated hatchet with a black bone handle and a history.

A number of absorbing letters will figure in the trial. Mrs. Barrett has bought a picturesque old home in Nova Scotia and is going there in a few days to seek rest and quiet pending the court proceedings.

Mrs. Barrett is a woman of rare beauty. She was considered among the fairest in Canada at her marriage to her first husband, Hastings Freeman, a wealthy lumberman. She had been married seventeen years when Mr. Freeman died. He left her a fortune. Six years later she married Harry V. Barrett. She put $10,000 of her money in the Brookline home.

She met Barrett when she was fifteen years old. He was an apple merchant in Annapolis and had just come from England. He wrote her love letters which she still has. But she married Freeman, the lumberman, and Barrett renewed the friendship in her widowhood.

DE BLOIS DESCENDANT.

Mrs. Barrett is a direct descendant of the De Blois family, which is one of the oldest in Boston. Her father was L. G. De Blois of Annapolis, N. S. In her college days she wrote for a Halifax newspaper under a nom de plume, the wife of one of the high officials of the provinces collaborating with her at times. She mingled with the best society in Canada.

A libel has been filed at Dedham by Mrs. Barrett's attorneys, charging Barrett with cruel and abusive treatment and excessive use of drugs and intoxicants. No cross libel has yet been filed by Barrett.

Minister Predicts Sing Sing for Siegel

NEW YORK, March 23.—The Rev. Henry Frank at a luncheon in Schuyler Theatre denounced Henry Siegel and Frank E. Vogel, saying that people had fallen. Sinclefs first "as easily as flies lured by sweets" and declaring Siegel would have "plenty of time to ruminate in Sing Sing."

Poet Noyes Praises Quick American Mind

Alfred Noyes, the English poet, who is to make his final appearance in Boston for the season a week from tomorrow night in Tremont Temple, says Britishers are slower to comprehend than Americans. "You do things more quickly than we Britishers," he says, "because of the more rapid grasp of the American mind. It was in America that first recognition was made of British authors from the days of Carlisle."

The Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham will preside at the Noyes meeting. Special guests will be Harvards varsity eight.

PROVIDENCE PROTEST OVER TOLLS CRISIS

PROVIDENCE, March 23.—Division 24, A. O. H., has adopted the following resolutions and forwarded a copy to William Randolph Hearst:

We, the members of Division 24, A. O. H., from the city of Providence, State of Rhode Island, in meeting assembled, do hereby send the following protest to our representatives in Congress:

That this division protests against the repeal of the free toll provision for American ships in the Panama canal at the dictation of the English government.

We also affirm that the free tolls bill does not violate the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and England having openly broken the Clayton-Bulwer treaty by annexing Belize territory, is not in position to charge the United States with a breach of national honor. She sent American commerces from the sea during the Civil War, and now would dictate the terms on which the American ships are to compete with her in an American waterway built with American money.

And that we endorse the stand you have taken in the above matter.

Signed by the committee on behalf of the Division.

MICHAEL J. SCULLY, Chairman.
HENRY A. CASEY, Secretary.

Lawyer Says Vogel Is Not in Contempt

CHICAGO, March 23.—Mr. Vogel is not in contempt of court and even should he fail to return to New York in time for the continuation of the inquiry into the affairs of Henry Siegel, of which he was a partner, he will not be amenable for contempt," said Attorney Levy Mayer, Chicago counsel for Frank E. Vogel of New York today.

"Mr. Vogel is sick in bed under the care of a physician and a nurse," continued Attorney Mayer. "The doctors will so certify, and their certificate is sufficient to nullify any charge of contempt that may be made.

Oldest Man Is Dead; Was 64 in 1863

LAMAR, Mo., March 23. — The oldest man in the United States, "Uncle" Henry Dorman, died in his one hundred and sixteenth birthday at his home here. Records show he was born in Steuben County, New York, January 10, 1790, when George Washington, first President of the United States, was still living. Army records show Henry Dorman was sixty-four when, in 1863, he enlisted as a private in Company F, Seventh Michigan Cavalry. He fought at Gettysburg.

Able to Take Second; Must Pay Alimony

SAN RAFAEL, Cal., March 22.—"If you are able to contract a second marriage, it is presumption that you are able to pay the alimony due to your former wife."

This was the decision of Judge Edgar Zook when Thomas A. Janes, department manager of the Pacific Surety Company, was brought into court on a charge he should not pay the $75 a month to Mrs. Florence H. Janes. Janes was $175 in arrears.

Cobes Will Wear Each Other's Eyes

CHICAGO, March 23.—Mr. and Mrs. Ira H. Cobe will wear each other's eyes. The millionaire traction magnate and his wife employed Alyn Williams, the English miniature painter, to make paintings of their eyes. The painting of Mrs. Cobe's eye will adorn a ring on the little finger of Mrs. Cobe, while the painting of Mrs. Cobe's eye will adorn a scarf pin worn by Mr. Cobe.

PEKING, March 23.—Bands of outlaws associated with the White Wolf pillaged the environs at Siang Yangfui, who resisted their entrance into an important military place. Seventy-tenths of the town was burned by the brigands.

BATTLESHIP THEFTS STILL UNEXPLAINED

The thefts of money and valuables from the junior officers' quarters on the battleship New Jersey is still a mystery. The "person" against whom suspicion was directed was fully exonerated in a special order from Secretary of the Navy Daniels to the Charlestown Navy Yard today. This leaves the mysterious robberies still unexplained.

The thefts caused a stir in naval circles. Soon after the New Jersey docked at Charlestown on its return from duty in Mexican waters, junior officers missed money and valuables from their clothing.

One junior officer was robbed of $600 in money. Others lost $400 in cash and property.

An investigation was made by a court of inquiry. The officers were questioned as to their losses, and the suspect was examined. The court's report was forwarded to Washington, and the order received today was the result.

It was declared that the mystery might never be cleared up. The report stated that the "only person" against whom suspicion was directed was exonerated."

Former 'Iron Mayor' of Paterson Is Ill

NEW YORK, March 23.—John Hinchcliffe, formerly Mayor of Paterson for three terms, ex-State Senator and father of the appointive commission form of government in Paterson, is seriously ill at St. Augustine, Florida, following a stroke of cerebral apoplexy. He was known as the "Iron Mayor."

Wellesley Safes Too Hot to Open

The four safes taken from the ruins of College Hall at Wellesley College will not be opened for a week. It was explained that the interior of the safes might be so hot that if the doors were opened today the contents would burst into flame. Superintendent of Grounds Austin of the College announced that no decision had been reached as to dynamiting the walls of the burned building.

ROOT RESPONSIBLE FOR GREAT BRITAIN'S DEMANDS ON CANAL

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Senator Elihu Root, Andrew Carnegie's lawyer, is solely responsible for Great Britain's latest protest against the United States granting freedom of tolls to American domestic commerce in the Panama Canal zone.

Mr. Knox, as Secretary of State under President Taft, had come almost to a complete agreement with England over the Canal, and in this agreement there was no denial of the right of the United States to fortify and administrate the Canal as a possession of this nation.

This was no denial of the right to exclude bonafide coastwise commerce from tolls. The only question of importance that remained to be settled was the character and the amount of the charge against foreign tonnage, including 'the foreign commerce of the United States, and whether the plan pressed by the United States was or was not as a matter of fact subsidy; and those knotty questions should be settled, by arbitration or by diplomacy.

ALL SENATOR ROOT'S IDEA.

Secretary Knox, negotiations with British Ambassador Bryce were sustained by the British government itself last winter, but Senator Root's warning or notice to President Taft—made a speech in the Senate in favor of the Canadian side of the case, conceding even more than the British had asked.

The claim that the treaty had been violated (by exempting domestic commerce from tolls and the claim that national honor was involved was not Great Britain's idea. It was Senator Root's idea (unless it originated with Mr. Root's client, Andrew Carnegie). Mr. Root made such a strong case for the British government that Ambassador Bryce, acting fortunately under instructions from Sir Edward Grey, British Minister of Foreign Affairs, immediately changed his attitude and began to press Great Britain's demands.

The AMERICAN has had access to the records through one who acted as assistant to Secretary Knox in his negotiations. This diplomat, who is one of the ablest in the country, remarked:

Great Britain acted as though she had suddenly found herself stronger than she supposed she was, and that with the help of a disloyal but very subtle and powerful American element to back up her claims, she could succeed in establishing a sort of joint Anglo-American control over the great Panama Canal.

SPOILED KNOX' PLAN.

Senator Root spoke in favor of England without notice to President Taft or Secretary Knox, thus furnishing Great Britain with a lever and an opportunity to abandon her diplomatic negotiations at a time when Secretary Knox had reason to believe that Great Britain would eventually come to an understanding with the United States on the basis of the definite propositions, neither of which involved a repeal of any part of the Panama Canal act.

Senator Root also introduced a bill in the Senate repealing the tolls exemption act. Congress killed this bill. The Republicans opposed it as hotly as the Democrats. President Wilson has now adopted the Root bill.

The record of the dates of Senator Root's speech and the bill, it is said, show that if he had desired to cripple the United States in a negotiation of paramount national importance Senator Root could not have acted more unfairly and powerfully to the interest of Great Britain than he did.

Anti-Saloon Paper in Washington Soon

COLUMBUS, March 23. — Publication of a new daily newspaper by the Anti-Saloon League at Washington, to start on the first day of the next congressional session, was announced here by national officials of the league. The purpose of the paper will be to promote effective compliance with national prohibition of the liquor traffic.

Fire Drills for Triangle Fire Date

NEW YORK, March 23.—The anniversary of the Triangle factory fire, which occurred on March 25, 1911, with the loss of 147 lives, will be commemorated this year by fire drills in factories throughout the city and in all its public schools.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON

The motor show season is over. A week ago saw the passage of the pleasure car exhibit. Saturday saw the close of the truck and today the last remnants of both are being eliminated. Mechanics building, which has housed both these great exhibitions, will take upon itself a normal appearance. Trucks are being removed from the building this morning with clocklike precision, and by noon today all of the ponderous trucks will have been removed and all that will remain to be done before the building is returned to its owners is the removal of the decorations. This will be done with that did the installation of the same.

Both these shows have brought a great business to Boston. They have increased the local business immensely and what is equally to the point is that the full benefit of the exhibition has yet to be harvested, as the list of prospects secured by the dealers at the show are full of promise and will yield to most of the dealers great results in the very near future.

Figures compiled from the manufacturers exhibiting at the Boston Automobile Show this year shows there were twenty-six who confined the manufacture of their product to cars of the four-cylinder type, seventeen to the six-cylinder type and twenty-one to both. These dealers were exhibited fifty-one models of the four and forty-two models of the six-cylinder type.

This corroborates the figures given out by the New York automobile show, and clearly demonstrates that the four retains its commercial strength.

There is a concert contest in California over the privilege of holding the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races in 1914. Santa Monica, which staged these events this year with great success, is desirous of securing the privilege of holding the same next year, while Frisco comes to the front with a request that she be allowed to hold the Vanderbilt in connection with the Panama exposition. Frisco is willing to let Santa Monica have one of the two events and feels that under the conditions she should be allowed to hold the Vanderbilt.

"The Perils of Pauline."

The Enthralling Pathe Motion Picture Novel.

For the benefit of any who may have missed the opening chapters of "The Perils of Pauline," the enthralling motion picture novel now appearing every Sunday in the Sunday American, a summary of them is printed here. Read this, see it in the moving pictures—then read the instalment in next Sunday's American and win some of the $25,000 in money prizes.

CHAPTER I.

THE handsome check which Pauline received for her story in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, and the Egyptian mummy which her multi-millionaire foster-father added to his collection of curiosities, formed the "first cause" which set the extraordinary affair in motion—as you will see.

Fate had already rendered the general conditions favorable. In acquiring his millions, old Stanford Marvin, president of the Marvin Rope Company, had also acquired premature age and a dangerous weakness of the heart. Any sudden shock would be likely to end his earthly career.

Further, the one man whom old Marvin implicitly trusted—Raymond Owen, his confidential secretary—had become an undiscovered rascal and morphine fiend, deep in the toils of an ingenious blackmailer named Montgomery Hicks. And both of them knew that substituting the secretary was "remembered" in his employer's will.

Further still, young Harry Marvin was so desperately in love with his foster daughter, Pauline, that he could think of nothing but immediate marriage—and to this old Marvin had no objection whatever. But Pauline had a very decided objection to being married in this offhand fashion.

"Pauline, you love Harry, don't you?" said the old man—and it was the day that the mummy-case was delivered and placed in the library of the magnificent Marvin mansion on the Hudson, and when the motor magnate's weak heart was giving him fresh and significant warnings.

"Yes, father," the girl answered. "Perhaps sometime I shall marry Harry, but not for a year or two."

Pressed for particulars, then out came Pauline's secret—the check for her first magazine story, her literary aspirations, her desire to travel and "see life" first. A husband would be "out of the picture" utterly.

That was the way the Cosmopolitan check worked.

The Egyptian mummy part was ready to enter the conspiracy. The association of a mummy with Pauline's affairs was not so remote as it would have been in the case of most girls. Pauline's mother was a native Egyptian, married to an Englishman. They had been drowned in an accident on the Silver Nile during one of old Marvin's visits to that country, and the man of millions had immediately adopted the engaging young orphan.

Enabls to make any reasonable objection to Pauline's plans for a year or two of independence, old Marvin tottered into the library and shut the door with the mummy. From inscriptions on the case he believed that it contained the mummy of an Egyptian princess. He pried off the lid and removed the centuries-old wrappings from the mummified head.

A curiously carved vial of green crystal fell to the floor, the stopper came out, a visible vapor arose. The pungent odor instantly deprived the old man of power to speak or move.

CHAPTER II.

Instead of a wizened mummy, old Marvin saw a lovely young woman, startlingly resembling Pauline—free herself from the mummy wrappings and step out of the case. But, whereas Pauline was of the blonde type, the hair of this animated mummy was black. She stretched out a fair arm toward the old man. On one wrist he saw a bracelet of linked scarabs.

Then she pointed, with evident design, light, to a wall portrait of Pauline, and from it to herself, as though calling attention to the resemblance. Marvin, from the expression on her face, thought that he must have nodded assent.

Suddenly Owen, the secretary, entered the room and placed the old man more comfortably in his chair. To the magnate's surprise Owen walked without appearing to notice the presence of the revivified mummy. She, however, saw the secretary and her movements became more hurried. She took from the mummy case a roll of papyrus and unrolled it before the old man's eyes. It was covered with hieroglyphics. Suddenly she fell on her knees before Marvin and spoke softly in his ear. Somehow the meaning of the message entered the old man's mind. He had received her secret.

Then, at the sound of voices in the hall, the strange creature quickly replaced herself in the case and gathered up about her the mummy bandages. Harry and Pauline, followed by Owen, entered—and at that moment Marvin threw off his paralysis.

CHAPTER III.

On the floor lay the green crystal vial which had fallen out of the mummy case. The odor which emanated from it recalled Pauline's new will was valid, the rascally secretary's disappointment at being left out of it was somewhat lessened by the thought that he could now shake off the blackmailing Hicks.

CHAPTER IV.

Hicks lost no time in adjusting the application of his talents to the new situation. He began in a way that astounded Owen—handing him a receipt in full for a debt that the secretary owed him. Owen was not too surprised to be able to promptly put the paper in his pocket.

"That's right," said Hicks. "You and I are going to be all right before long that a matter of a thousand or two wouldn't be worth talking about between friends."

Owen turned a puzzled and worried gaze upon his companion. Hicks observed him closely, read the misgivings in Owen's mind, and drawing close, whispered something in the latter's ear.

But Owen's drug-saturated nerves trembled at the thought. He pushed Hicks aside and walked rapidly out of the room, calling over his shoulder:

"I won't have anything to do with you. I don't want you to come near me or speak to me again. I'm done with you."

"When you want me you know where to find me," was Hicks' parting answer.

Hicks felt sure that he would not have to wait very long before he heard from the secretary, who, though deprived of his expected legacy, was now trustee of half the income from the dead magnate's estate, and Pauline's legal guardian for the remainder of her spinsterhood.

THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME

Hall Caine's Greatest Story

THE NARRATIVE OF MARY O'NEILL
FIFTH PART
I BECOME A MOTHER

Copyright, 1912, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright, 1913, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright in Great Britain. Copyright, 1913, by A. P. Watt & Son and Hall Caine.

I knew he knew what my father meant, so I said, trembling like a sheep that walks up to a barking dog:

"Hadn't you better ask that question of my father himself?"

"Perhaps I should if he were here, but he isn't, so I ask you. Your father is a strange man. There's no knowing what crude things he will not do to gratify his primitive instincts. But is does not spend three or four thousand pounds for nothing. He isn't a fool exactly."

"I see you," I said. I could not help it. It was forced out of me.

My husband flinched and looked at me. There was a pride in him, which always lay underneath, came uppermost.

"Look here, Mary," he said, "I came for an explanation and I intend to have one. Your father may give this affair what gloss he pleases, but you must know as well as I do that rumor and report are saying, so we might as well speak plainly, that the fact that the doctor has made certain statements about your condition, and that your father is giving this entertainment because . . . well, because he is expecting an heir!"

To husband's astonishment I answered:

"Yes."

"So you admit it? Then perhaps you'll be good enough to tell me how that condition came about?"

Knowing he needed no cruel notation, I made no answer.

"Can't you speak?" he said.

But still I remained silent.

"Have you ever told our fabulous have been since our marriage, so I ask you again how does that condition come about?"

I was now trembling more than ever, but a kind of forced courage came to me and I said:

"Why do you ask? You seem to know already."

"I know what anonymous letters have told me, if that's what you mean. But I'm your husband and have a right to know from you. How does your condition come about, I ask you?"

THE LETTER

I cannot say what impulse moved me at that moment unless it was the desire to make a clean breast and an end of everything, but, stepping to my desk, I took out of a drawer the letter which Price had intercepted and threw it on the table.

He took it up and read it, with the air of one to whom the contents were not news, and then asked how I came by it.

"It was taken out of the hands of a woman who was in the act of posting it," I said. "She confessed that it was one of a number of such letters which had been inspired, if not written by your friend Alma."

"My friend Alma!"

"Yes, your friend Alma."

His face assumed a frightful expression and he said:

"So that's how it is to be, is it? In spite of the admission you have just made you wish to imply that this" (fielding out the letter) "is a trumped-up affair, and that Alma is at the bottom of it. You're going to learn it yet, are you, and shall!

your condition under your position as a married woman?"

I was so taken by surprise by this infamous suggestion that I could not speak to deny it, and my husband went on to say:

"But it doesn't matter a rush to me who is at the bottom of the accusation contained in this letter. There's only one thing of any consequence—it is true!"

My head was reeling, my eyes were dim, my palms were moist, I felt as as I were throwing myself over a precipice, but I answered:

"It is perfectly true."

I think that was the last thing he expected. After a moment he said:

"Then you have broken your marriage vows—is that it?"

"Yes, if you call it so."

"Call it so? Call it so? Good heavens, what do you call it?"

I did not reply, and after another moment he said:

"But perhaps you wish me to understand that this man whom I was so foolish as to invite to my house abused my hospitality and betrayed my wife. Is that what you mean?"

"No," I said. "He observed the laws of hospitality much better than you did, and if I am betrayed I betrayed myself."

I shall never forget the look with which my husband received this confession. He drew himself up with the air of an injured man and said:

"What a mess you've made of it, yourself deliberately. Good God!"

He stopped for a moment and then said with a rush:

"I suppose you've not forgotten what happened at the time of our marriage . . . your resistance and the ridiculous comment I submitted to? Why did I submit? Because I thought your innocence, your consent-bred ideas, and your ignorance of the first conditions of matrimony . . . But I've been fooled, so you now tell me . . . after all my unwillingness . . . It is you have deliberately . . . In the name of God do you know what you are? Have you told me the truth for a week who does what you've done. Do you want me to tell you what that name is?

I was quivering with shame, but my mind which was going at lightning speed, was thinking of London, of Cairo, of Rome, or Paris.

"Why don't you speak?" he cried, lifting his voice in his rage. "Don't you understand what a letter like this is to any man?"

My heart choked. But the thought that came to me was that had it come fifty had been, he considered he had a right to treat me in this way because he was a man and I was a woman—brought strength out of my weakness, so that when he went on to curse my Church and my religion, saying this was all that had come of "the mummery of my mamma," I flared up for a moment and said:

"You can spare yourself these blasphemies. If I have done wrong it is I, and not my church, that is to blame for it."

"If you have done wrong!" he cried. "Damn it, have you lost all sense of a woman's duty to her husband? While you have been married to me and I have been fool enough not to claim you as a wife, you thought you were only fit company for the saints and angels, you have been prostituting yourself to this blusterer, this . . ."

"That is a lie," I said, stepping up to him in the middle of the floor. "It's true that I am married to you, but HE is my real husband and you . . . you are nothing to me at all."

My husband stood for a moment with his mouth agape. Then he began to laugh—loudly, derisively, mockingly.

"Nothing to you, am I? You don't mind hearing my name, though, and when your time comes you'll expect it to come to your door."

His face had become shockingly distorted. He was quivering with fury.

"That's not the worst, either," he cried. "It's not enough that you should tell me to my face that somebody else is your real husband, but you must flaunt your guilty secret in spring into my house. Isn't that what it all comes to . . . all this damnable fuss of your father's . . . that you are going to palm off on me as my name and family your own and this man's . . . bastard!"

And with the last word, in the drunken rage of his race, he lifted his arm and struck me with the back of his hand across the cheek.

The physical shock was fearful, but the moral infamy was a hundred-fold worse. I can truly say that not alone for myself did I suffer. When my mind, still going at lightning speed, thought of Marion, who loved me so tenderly, I felt crushed by my husband's blow to the lowest depths of shame.

I must have screamed, though I did not know it, for at the same moment Price was in the room and I saw that the housekeeper (drawn perhaps, before, by my husband's loud voice) was on the landing outside the door. But even that did not serve to restrain him.

"No matter," he said. "After what has passed you may not enjoy tomorrow's ceremony. But you shall go through it! By heaven, you shall! And when it is over, I shall have something to say to your father."

NEWS SPREAD

And with that he swung out of the room and went lunging down the stairs.

I was still standing in the middle of the floor, with the blow of my husband's hand tingling on my cheek, when Price, after clashing the door in the face of the housekeeper, said, with her black eyes ablaze:

"Well, if ever I wanted to be a man before (Why?"

News of the scene went like wildfire through the house, and another came to comfort me. In her crude and blundering way she told me of a similar insult she had suffered at the hands of the "bad Lord Ilsa," and how it had been the real reason of her going to America.

"Us married ladies have much to put up with. But cheer up, dearie. I guess you'll have gotten over it by tomorrow morning."

When she was gone I sat down before the fire. I did not cry. I felt as if I had reached a depth of suffering that was a thousand fathoms too deep for tears. I do not think I wept again for many months afterward, and then it was a great joy, not a great grief, that brought me a burst of blessed tears.

But I could hear my dear good Price crying behind me, and when I said:

"Now you see for yourself that I cannot remain in this house any longer," she answered in a low voice:

"Yes, my lady."

"I must go at once—tonight if possible."

"You shall. Leave everything to me, my lady."

PAPE'S BREAKS A COLD AT ONCE

Don't stay stuffed-up! End grippe misery with Pape's Cold Compound.

Relief comes instantly.

A dose taken every two hours until three doses are taken will end grippe misery and break up a severe cold, either in the head, chest, body or limbs.

It promptly opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages in the head, stops nasty discharge or nose running, relieves sick headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

Don't stay stuffed-up. Quit blowing and snuffling! Ease your throbbing head! Nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only 25 cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes fine, causes no inconvenience. Be sure you get the genuine.

LOOKS YEARS YOUNGER! GRAY HAIR DARKENED BEAUTIFULLY WITH SAGE

Says Sage and Sulphur Will Stop Falling Hair and Cure Dandruff.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, then left to age and carefully filtered, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggy and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss. Some druggists make their own, but it isn't nearly so nice as "Wyeth's."

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all want to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all the gray hairs have disappeared; after another application or two it will be restored to its natural color, and it becomes more glossy, soft and luxuriant than ever.

Local druggists say they are selling a lot of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur," and it surely helps folks appear years younger.

COBB EXPOSES SOME FOIBLES OF BATTERS

Written for the Boston American

By TY COBB.

Nearly every hitter in baseball either prefers the road or home. Some go better when on the road, because I like the opposition of foreign crowds. They key me up and that is what I need.

On the other hand, my great rival in the American League, who is more phlegmatic in his nature, busts them better at home than he does on the road.

Most of my gains were made on Jackson last summer when both clubs were making long trips through the east. This condition of things is hard to explain, as are many other recognized facts in baseball.

Some clubs are better road clubs than at home. The Giants, they tell me, always bat stronger away from their own doorstep. The New York players maintained for a long time that it was the glaring, bright-hued advertising signs in centre field that hurt their hitting at home. But a nice green background was painted in at the Polo Grounds for the benefit of the hitters and still they continue to be a better road club.

Mack's Uniforms Serve a Purpose.

There is a peculiar phenomenon in connection with the Athletics and their uniforms. I hear fault found with the drab traveling uniforms of the Athletics all around the American League circuit, and, in fact, neither "Connie" Mack nor his players think that these dirty looking uniforms are worthy of being entered in an art exhibit or a tailors' show.

But for several seasons the Athletics played good ball at home, and always fell back as soon as they hit the road. They wore quite natty and pretentious uniforms for traveling purposes in those days, but perhaps they were too careful of them for fear of spoiling the cut or crease or something, for they won few ball games in them.

Then Mack got the dull drab traveling uniforms for the club in 1910. They looked a bad when new that there was no chance of spoiling them. The boys got away to a fine jump on the first trip and came through with the pennant largely through the good work on the road. They have been a great road ball club ever since, hitting like demons away from home, and at home, too, for that matter.

"Connie" has received many protests against the looks of the uniforms, but to all kicks he makes the same reply:

"We win ball games on the road in them. That is all we put on uniforms for. We are not representing a fashionable Summer hotel you know. I guess he's right, too. They certainly win ball games.

Makes No Difference To Larry Lajoie.

Lajoie is one of the players who "busts them" whether he is on the road or at home. It does not make any difference to him, but he is one ball player who will probably never have an equal. He is just a natural hitter, and I don't look for any more ball players to have his wonderful record for continued hitting, because his smooth, easy temperament is responsible for it.

He has the temperament to last. Most others have not his nervous systems to keep up the sustained pace.

Lajoie never tries to outguess the pitcher. He does not need to. He even swings at bad balls, a cardinal sin in most batters, and turns them into base hits.

Lajoie has the pitcher half licked before he ever steps into the box, that is, most pitchers. They are all afraid of him, and nervousness makes it easier for him to push the ball a mile.

They tell a funny story about Lajoie and a recruit pitcher who joined a certain American League club late one season. He was green from the bushes, and no intellectual giant anyway, spending little of his time in reading the newspapers.

As the race was practically settled when the youngster joined the club manager sent him to the box against Cleveland one day for his try-out. He was getting along fairly well when Lajoie came to the bat in the fourth or fifth inning with a couple of men on the bases and two out.

Most of his own players on the bench, the "fans" in the stands, and even the Cleveland players began to feel almost sorry for the young pitcher, who was about to have his hopes of big league fame blasted by a drive from the Frenchman's bat.

And Lajoie Struck Out.

The manager contemplated taking the youngster out, but finally figured that he would let him stay in the game and absorb his medicine, because the winning or losing of the contest would make no difference in the ultimate standing of the club.

The men on the pitcher's club began to feel sorry for themselves and the third baseman moved back a few steps, as Lajoie has a bad habit of "busting them" down that alley at a rate which is liable to give a third baseman's "bean" right loose if he is playing in too close.

Then, when all these preparations had been perfected, the pitcher fanned on Lajoie, much to the surprise of the ball players and spectators. He started for the bench while the crowd shouted. He did not take off his cap, and the fans put it down to his modesty and applied all lovely because a crowd likes to see an unassuming youngster. So do ball players.

"Who is getting the big hand?" he asked the pitcher on the bench as he took the customary drink of water.

"It's for you because you whiffed the big Frenchman," replied the manager.

"Who is he?" inquired the recruit.

"Larry Lajoie."

The busher almost fell in a faint.

If he had known who Lajoie was before the Frenchman came to the bat, he would have been licked.

NEWSBOYS OUT FOR THE NINE! SEE "HAPPY"

Batteries today—

Wait till the Greater Boston newsboys get into the game and you'll see the real thing in amateur baseball. It won't be long—two weeks from today is the time—9:30 a.m. on Boston Common, Monday, April 6.

At that hour hundreds of newsboys will pile out upon the Common a carefree, happy, holiday army of joys. During the entire Easter vacation period they will go through a course of Spring training under the direction of "Happy" in readiness for a Summer of real up-to-the-snuff baseball.

"Happy" is being deluged with applications from the newsboys. They come in every mail. Not a boy between the ages of ten and eighteen will be barred.

"Enthusiasm? You bet," says "Happy." "You never saw anything like this outburst. These boys are all anxious to play ball. They're all interested, and there isn't the shadow of a doubt but what we will have the classiest teams to be found among boys hereabouts.

"There'll be four divisions of teams —the ponies of boys between 10 and 12; colts, 12 and 14; juniors, 14 to 16 and seniors, 16 to 18.

"Let the boys keep sending in their applications. The earlier the better. Now, everybody, get together to make it a big season."

These are some of the newsboys whose applications came in today: Jacob Skinner, third base, age 16; Louis Marshall, third base, age 16; Leo Ross, pitcher, age 18; M. Casper, second base, age 16; Samuel Solomon, outfield, age 18; David Turbshansky, outfield, age 14; Irving Freedman, shortstop, age 18; Max Wallace, catcher, age 14; James Kelly, pitcher of centre field, age 14; Abe Fojrer, catcher or fielder, age 12½; Bennett Solomon, centre field, age 15; Raymond Grimshaw, fielder, age 13; William Foley, shortstop, age 17; Carl Newman, pitcher, age 14; James P. Kelley, first base, age 14; Daniel McKinney, outfield, age 12; James Walensky, outfield, age 16; Barney Walensky, first base, age 14.

"Happy" asks the newsboys who want to play to fill out the following blank and address it to "Happy," care Circulating Department, Boston American:

Name .....

Adress .....

City or Town .....

Age..... Position.....

"Happy" also wants to get challenges from the managers of boys' baseball nines and asks them to designate the average age of the players.

ON THE TRAIL

By MOYNAHAN

Mulrenan Jumps from High School to Red Sox

WOBURN LAD SAYS HE'S WORKING HARD FOR A PITCHING JOB.

By DOMINICK MULRENAN.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 23.—There are none of the recruit pitchers who are any more eager to make good with the Red Sox than I am. I have lived in Woburn, Mass., all my life, and if I am to play ball in the big show I would like to do so in Boston, which is near my home and also the homes of my friends.

Dominick Mulrenan, professional baseball player.

I am twenty years of age and this is my first venture as a professional baseball player. I got my first experience as a pitcher at Woburn High, where I performed in the box in 1910, 1911 and 1912. I did fairly well and was classed as a star by my schoolmates. But then it is one thing to be a star for a high school nine and another to hold down a regular job with a team like the Red Sox.

I played semi-professional baseball last year for the All-Woburns and the Marlboro team. It was while playing for Marlboro that I attracted the attention of Patsy Donovan, the Red Sox scout.

Mr. Donovon recommended me to former President McAleer of the Red Sox and I was tendered a contract for this year and gladly accepted it, as any other boy of my age would do.

I have worked hard since I arrived at the training camp. Some of the veteran players on the squad have encouraged me by saying a few kind words about my pitching ability. I am not foolish enough to believe that I will be able to win out in the American League without making a hard fight, but I am ready to do this, and feel that I will justify the confidence that the Red Sox management must have had in me when they offered me a chance to perform for a major league club.

I am a lover of all kinds of outdoor sports, but baseball is my favorite pastime. I have followed the national game since I was a mere slip of a lad in short trousers, and I believe that my career has been similar to that of hundreds of other boys throughout the United States who have been captivated by baseball because it is a clean, thrilling sport which affords one plenty of fun and an opportunity to call into play skill and brain work.

Travers-Herreshoff in London Matches

LONDON, March 23.—Jerome D. Travers and Fred Herreshoff, the two American amateur golfers who arrived here last week, being the first of the United States players to come to this country for this year's British amateur championship tournament, have been invited to play with a picked English team against the joint Oxford-Cambridge team at Muirfield next Wednesday.

The two Americans will naturally spend practically all of their time at Sandwich, where the tournament will take place, but they are seriously considering the invitation extended to them to play at Muirfield.

College Wrestlers Clash in Title Meet

PHILADELPHIA, March 23. — The annual intercollegiate wrestling championships will be held at the University of Pennsylvania this week, Friday and Saturday, with Cornell, Princeton, Columbia, Pennsylvania and Lehigh the contending teams. Yale is not in the league this year, but has made application for membership next season, while the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, which has the strongest of the intercollegiate wrestling teams, is also ineligible to compete this year. It is generally expected that Cornell will be able to retain the title.

The entry list is very big and some of the best amateur boxers in New England will display their wares. In all fifty boxers have sent in their entries and it looks like there will be plenty doing until midnight for the members.

Wolgast Signs for Four Bouts on Coast

SAN FRANCISCO, March 23.—Jimmy Coffroth, fight promoter, today announced that he had practically closed a deal by which Ad Wolgast will take on four matches in San Francisco within the next few months. Coffroth, it is announced, has agreed to give Wolgast a guarantee of $50,000 for the four matches.

Wolgast's opponents likely will be Willie Ritchie, Harlem Tommy Murphy, Freddie Welsh and Leach Cross.

The Boston Ball Teams Need a Battle Song

You Can Write It and Win $25 Prize Contest

Scores of baseball battle songs are coming in to the Contest Editor. The fans of New England are engaged in a battle of verse to help the Boston baseball teams and win a $25 prize. The songs contain enough enthusiasm to make a world's champion team. Have you sent in one? If not, try. You may win the $25. And what's more, YOU may bring another world's series to Boston. A few thousand strong-voiced fans, singing a swinging, spirited battle song, will win more games than Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb or Walter Johnson. A song, the Marseillaise, turned a French rabble into a force that swept aside organized armies. That song had a PUNCH. It beat on the heartstrings of the French peasant and made him a conqueror. Write your song with a PUNCH in it. The song with the most punch will win the $25. And the name of the winner may go down in baseball history as having helped a great team win a pennant. Write your battle song now. Mail it to the Baseball Song Contest Editor, the Boston AMERICAN, 80-82 Summer street, Boston.

LANGFORD STAR IN TWO BOUTS IN NEW YORK

Sam Langford who recently returned from Europe after defeating Joe Jeannetta will be a prominent figure in New York during the coming week. Langford is to be the headliner of the two leading shows.

At the National Sporting Club tonight Langford will oppose Bill Watkins, the Memphis heavyweight, who has had considerable experience in the roped arena. He has never attained any such prominence as Sam, but he is regarded as good enough to make the Bostonian extend himself to win.

Two other bouts between colored boxers are on the same card. Al Wilkie of New York, scheduled to box George Robinson of Boston, and Darky Griffin of Brooklyn, will mix with Billy Williams of New York, in the ten-round opening bout.

Langford's opponent at the Empire A. C. Friday night will be Battling Jim Johnson, who recently came into prominence by his bout with Champion Jack Johnson in Paris. The referee called the bout a draw and Jack Johnson has declared that he had injured his arm during the bout.

Battling Jim Johnson has declared since his arrival here that the only thing which saved Jack Johnson from losing his title was the shortness of the bout.

The Johnson-Langford contest will be the only ten-round event on the program, but there will be the usual number of short preliminary bouts.

"PRO" HOCKEY STARS IN BIG BATTLES HERE

The professional hockey teams will make their first appearance in this city this week, when the Wanderers of Montreal, members of the Hockey Association battle with the Vancouver Club of the Pacific Coast League at the Boston Arena for a purse of $2,500.

The team scoring the largest number of goals in the two games, which will be played on Wednesday and Saturday nights, will be awarded the "big end" of the purse. The games will consist of three twenty-five-minute periods.

Both clubs have been strengthened for these games and the fans will be tendered the best article of hockey ever seen in Boston. Fred "Cyclone" Taylor, who was such a sensational star in the professional series played in Boston three years ago, is with the Vancouver Club, and is playing the fastest game of his career, while "Dicky" Pirre will furnish the fans with many thrills with his speed and hurdling.

Although greatly handicapped all year through players being injured, the Wanderers are now back in condition, which means that there is no team in the professional ranks a great deal stronger. Art Ross, "Newsie" Roberts and the Cleghorn brothers are shining lights of the Wanderers and all are well known to the followers of the game in Boston.

SPEAKER AND JOE WOOD DUE TO JOIN RED SOX AT HOT SPRINGS THIS WEEK

BRAVES GET AWAY BRIGHT AND EARLY FOR DIAMOND BATTLE WITH CADETS' TEAM

SPEAKER AND WOOD TO JOIN SOX THIS WEEK

By JACK CONWAY.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 23.—The Red Sox squad here will be completed this week when "Smoky" Joe Wood and Tris Speaker arrive in town. Wood is expected to reach this fair village today, while Speaker will probably greet his old teammates again before Saturday.

Bill Carrigan permitted Wood to come here on the condition that he would not [illegible] hands. [illegible] Wells thro[illegible] enjoy the famous mineral baths.

Joe will remain here when the Red Sox [illegible] exhibition [illegible] Carrigan [illegible] Joe would [illegible] team until [illegible] before it takes the rattler for dear old Boston.

Just how it looks at [illegible] would be able to duplicate [illegible] for President Lannin [illegible] the middle of May [illegible] America if we could [illegible] inside of three weeks [illegible] is too expensive a man to [illegible] chances with his star hurler.

DOUBT OVER SPEAKER'S RACKET.

Speaker, of course, will [illegible] regular league right [illegible] at Hot Springs has been playing baseball all Winter and naturally is in good condition. The writer was told that Speaker will receive $18,000 for playing baseball this year. This would be twice as much as he got last year, and would make him the highest priced player in baseball. The members of the Red Sox party, however, do not believe that Speaker will receive more than $12,000 a year.

This would be a great deal less than the Federal League would be willing to pay the Texan if he remaining with the Red Sox. Spoke has a chance to get into a world series, which would not [illegible] Boston [illegible] and a [illegible] sure proposition.

SEVEN GAME ON TODAY.

The Federal League [illegible] of the other hard luck [illegible] the season although it looked as if though it would. Speaker, too, is not anxious to show in cities like Buffalo, Kansas City and Indianapolis.

The Texan enjoys playing before great crowds in the big baseball centres and the writer believes he would sacrifice a few dollars in order to stay with the big show.

Speaker is worth every cent he receives from the Red Sox management. Cobb undoubted is a better all around performer than Speaker, but the Sox star has more influence than Ty on the course of a season and is always working for the interests of his team.

There will be another practice game today between the regulars and Yannigans. The series now stands five games to one in favor of the second string team. The regulars are determined to even matters up and if the Yannigans and Hugh Bedient may perform on Saturday look out.

LEADLEIN OUT AT SHORTSTOP.

Leadlein has not yet pitched in a real game, as the weather has been chilly during the past few days.

It now seems almost certain that "Heine" Wagner will not start the season at shortstop for the Red Sox. Wagner's health is perfect, but the veteran does not want to risk hurting his throwing arm by getting into the game before the weather becomes warm.

If Wagner remains out of the line at the start of the season, either Janvrin or Scott will play shortstop. Janvrin is a good ball player, but lacked confidence last season.

Scott is a natural born infield goof, as he was one of the chief stars of the American Association last year.

Hooper and Engle defeated President Lannin and Adrian Scheiss by 10 to 6 up in two golf matches yesterday.

BOB could never recall where they went that day. His head was in a whirl. When the girls' shopping tour ended Orchid handed him a bill that he knew was worth a dozen trips. "I'm so sorry you've lost your money, Bob," she sympathized sweetly. "But you can make far more money as a private chauffeur than you can with the taxi people. Our man has just left, and I am sure father will give you his place. I know he'll be glad it will help a—a friend of mine." For a moment he was about to explain. Then he stopped. Hadn't he read wonderful stories of chauffeurs who had made love to their employers' daughters quite, quite successfully? He took the bill gingerly and stuffed it in his pocket. "Thank you," he said. "I'll come."—STELLA FLORES.

THERE was no use dodging the fact any longer. He was in love. And Orchid had gone back to Boston without seeing or forgiving him. There was only one thing to do, and three days later Bob was in Boston, too. He had noticed that young men who owned their own cars were never unpopular. So he bought one. He went to the garage where it had been sent to look it over and take it out to do some shopping. Unfortunately, something didn't quite work. But the manager happened to be near, and noticing Bob's disappointment, offered him one of the garage cars. "It's only a taxi," he said, "but you can do your day's sightseeing in it. And, by the way, here's a chauffeur's cap and coat. You might as well take the whole outfit." Two hours later, as Bob waited outside a store for some parcels, a trio of pretty girls hailed him. "Taxi, please!" said one. Their eyes met. It was Orchid.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

MACGREGGOR is cumming to dinner tonite, sed Pa, & he is going to bring a frend with him naimed John Lindsay. They are two fine Scotchmen, I'm sed, & I have brought, hoam sum Scotch mutton ples that I got at a Scotch bakery. Fix up a nice dinner for them, like the deer littel wife you are, Pa sed to Ma.

I wish you had let me know a littel sooner, sed Ma. I haven't got much time now, but I will do the best I can.

One good thing, though, about yure Scotch frends & yureself, sed Ma, you never have to be fed vary heavy. You always do moar arguing than eeting. Wen a Scotchman gits a idee into his hed you can't git it out without blasting, sed Ma.

Wife, sed Pa, you have our nashunality wrong. The Scotch are always perfeckly willing to admit it wen they are wrong, but they are so seldom wrong that they dount have to be vary good admitters. Macgreggor & I git along grate, sed Pa. You never herd us argue much.

Only every time Macgreggor cums to the house, Ma sed. You get along like a prohibishun-ist & a brewer, Ma sed.

Jest then Mister Macgreggor calm, but he was alone. After he had shook hands with all of us, Pa sed, ware is John?

Lindsay? sed Macgreggor. Why, he went back to Springfield on the afternoon train.

But he was cumming to dinner with you, sed Pa.

Nothing of the kind, sed pa's frend. He told you that he wud be glad to cum to dinner next time he came to the city, but that he had to git back hoam.

He dident say anything of the kind, Mac, sed Pa. He sed that he was cumming up to the house with you.

He dident say anything of the kind, sed Macgreggor. Dount tell me what he sed. Why, you seven sed you wud see him off on the train if he dident know the way to the stashun.

I dident menshun a thing about a train or a stashun, sed Pa, but never mind, Mac. You simply forgot the deetails of the conversashun. Cum on, dinner is reddy.

I never forgit deetails, sed Macgreggor. You are the one with the short memory, but we will let it go at that. John had to go hoam, & I am sorry, beekaus I want you to know him better.

Ma wanted to ask sumthing about Mister Lindsay, but she was afrade Pa & his frend wud git started to arguing aggenn, so she started to talk about sumthing else.

I was reading today that President Wilson used to know shorthand, she sed. I always thought I wud like to have littel Bobbie lern shorthand.

Many a yung man rites shorthand that wud never malk a president, sed Pa. I dount think Bobbie wud ever malk a good president.

I dount agree with you, sed Mister Macgreggor. I think yure yung son looks jest like the kind of boy that wud malk a president sum day. He has a fine shaped hed & vary fine eyes. They look like his mother's eyes.

Moast peopul think they look like mine, sed Pa.

Moast peopul are foolish, sed Mister Macgreggor, & that is the way Pa & him was all the evening. They are both jest like Ma sed the Scotch was, but I think Mister Macgreggor knows moar than Pa, anyway he knows moar about littel boys & presidents.

Donald McLanny, as behooved his reputation as the strong man and athlete of the district, entered his name for all the events in the village sports; and, as a matter of fact, was a hot favorite for most of them.

In short, great things were expected of him, but expectations were hardly realized. The first event on the program was the quarter-mile, and of eight runners Donald finished eighth.

"Donald, Donald," said a fellow Scot, "why did ye no run faster?"

The strong man sneered.

"Run faster!" he said contemptuously. "An' me reservin' meself for the bagpipe competition!"

How Are Your Investments?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A WIFE will say, "I haven't any. It takes all of my allowance to keep the house going." A young girl will reply that she spends all her money on clothes and a good time, and the husband and father will take mental inventory of his stocks and bonds and make no reply at all.

No one seems to remember that there are other, better and more necessary investment than those that are made over a counter. That the Real Investment bears no interest of 5 or 6 per cent. Its joys are not confined to certain coupon-cutting periods, and neither business inflation nor depression affects it.

It is the investment in friendship, best of all the investments a woman makes, from the day she toddles with outstretched arms to the one holding out the largest and most tempting lolly-pop, through the days of painful and uncertain friendships, of youth and love, when she counted quantity as greater than quality, to the time when she sits in her chimney corner and rejoices if she has one faithful friend left, there is no investment she can make so precious, so rich in coupon-bearing, so reliable and unfailing, as in the friendship of one of her own sex.

I receive daily letters from girls complaining because of the greater attractiveness of some girl chum. "She has all the boys falling in love with her," they write, "and I intend to have nothing more to do with her."

"I have had a girl chum for six years," writes another one of these foolish ones, "but have ended our friendship because a boy I adore danced with her oftener the other night than he danced with me."

Silly, silly girls, to throw away the genuine for the counterfeit; to malign, abuse and turn down a good, faithful friend because some boy who is here today and will be gone tomorrow looks at her with admiration

A boy comes into a girl's life, metaphorically whirls her around once or twice in a dance, and dances on to some other girl. The girl friend of his partner was there before he came, and will be there long after he is gone and forgotten. She is not a passing fancy, but a very present and immovable fact. The playmate of one's childhood, the confidante of one's youth, the inspiration and consolation of one's mature years. The dear old girl friend! How I deplore every tendency to give up such a friendship for the more transient friendship of one of the opposite sex!

"Save your money," Wisdom cries; "you will need it for your old age."

"Save your girl friend," I cry; "for you will need her in every age and circumstance. You will find her the best investment the heart of a girl can make."

A New Mystery on the Moon

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

Professor Pickering's Discovery of Strange Changes Going on There May Point to Its Being Inhabited.

THERE is something new on the moon, or if it is not new it is newly discovered. If it should turn out to be an evidence of the existence of life in the lunar world it would rank as one of the most sensational discoveries that astronomers have ever made.

An inhabitant of the moon would be a hundred times more interesting than an inhabitant of the planet Mars, because his world is a hundred times nearer to us. A wireless telegraph signal would go to the moon in a little over a second and a quarter. The moon is the only world outside our own whose mountains, valleys, seas, basins and volcanoes are visible to us.

Now let us turn to the discovery that has just been made. It is announced by a bulletin from the Harvard College Observatory, and it relates to observations made by Professor W. H. Pickering at the Mandeville station of that observatory. Professor Pickering is one of the astronomers who have long suspected that if there is no other kind of life on the moon, there is at least some form of vegetation. His latest discovery, however, seems to be concerned with something else than vegetation.

The immediate object of his observations is what is usually called a "crater," but which would be more accurately described as a "ring-mountain." In the northwestern quarter of the moon, close to the shore line of the dried-up lunar sea named the Mare Crisium, or "Sea of Crises." This crater, or ring-mountain, has long been known in lunar-geography under the name of Einmart. It is about twenty-five miles in diameter and encloses a flat plain, or circular valley, having a small hill in the centre, while the precipitous mountain-ring rises at one point 'en chonelend feet above the floor of the little valley. This mountain wall shines with singular brilliance in the sunlight.

In January, 1913, Professor Pickering noticed that the interior of Einmart was extraordinarily bright, so much so that he called attention to the fact in the great astronomical journal, the Astronomische Nachrichten. But in the following March, it had become relatively dark, and this darkness continued all through the remainder of 1913, and also through January of this year. In February, however, it began to brighten, and during the earlier part of the present month of March its brightnes has persisted, although up to March 10 it had not become as brilliant as it was in January, 1913.

Now, what causes these changes, and what are those brilliant objects? Is there something alive in Einmart, or is nature playing pranks there all by herself?

It does not follow that the moon is as full of life as the earth is, and the phenomena of Einmart may have nothing to do with any inhabitants there, but if there are inhabitants on the moon it is hardly possible that they could resemble any of the animals dwelling on the earth, and for that very reason it might be exceedingly difficult for us to recognize their existence by any effects which they might produce upon their surroundings. As to seeing them directly, there can be no hope of that until telescopes are made a hundred times more powerful than any yet constructed.

Two actual photographs of the moon taken with the Great Refractor of the Lick Observatory, showing Einmart, where the strange changes are taki ng place

SHE felt suddenly emboldened to sound some viewpoints of her own. He had asked her for the twentieth time if she was enjoying herself.

"Yes, Mr. Scott," she agreed, "it's grand, the food, the music, and everything; but tell me," . . . she looked squarely into his steel gray eyes . . . "did you bring your other private secretaries to eat here?"

He hesitated; was dumfounded by the directness of the question and her temerity in putting it. But Scott was never at a loss with women for long. He was smiling good naturedly at her now.

"Why, of course," he answered. "Some of them, at least. I haven't had the inclination to bring them all. You're different."

She was still staring into his eyes. "And your wife," she said boldly; "does she know? Does she approve?"

HIS EXCUSES

"Why, you're putting me on trial, little girl," he laughed, in a disinterested sort of way, but the hilarity lacked mirth. "What on earth's come over you, just when we had reason to get acquainted and are having a good time?"

"Nothing; but I can't make myself believe I am doing right, or that you are, either."

He leaned over and placed a reassuring hand on hers.

"Put such thoughts out of your head, my child. I've told you that I wouldn't have brought you here if I hadn't been right. You see other people here, or would, if you could look in a dance, and dances on to some other girl. The girl friend of his partner was there before he came, and will be there long after he is gone and forgotten. She is not a passing fancy, but a very present and immovable fact. pressed a napkin to his face. He coughed, and as he dropped the napkin reached hastily for his glass of water.

The girl bent forward in alarm.

"Are you ill?" she asked excitedly.

He recovered as quickly as he had been attacked.

"No, not ill," he said, quietly, "I swallowed something the wrong way, I guess."

He was quite composed now, but he had good reason for distress. What he had "swallowed" was a vision of Paul Montgomery, who had just passed their booth.

The importer took out his watch. "Gracious," he exclaimed; "it's nearly 3 o'clock! I must run for it! Have an appointment at the office at twothirty. Here!" He peeled off a ten-dollar note from his roll of bills. "You settle for the luncheon and come along. I'll tell them as I pass out."

In Fairyland

IN the first week of Gertrude's services as secretary to his father, Jack Scott missed few opportunities to invade the sacred confines of the inner office. Scott frequently found him there, but if he felt any chagrin, he kept it to himself. Jack always had some excuse, or speedily framed one. The obvious evidences of the boy's motive, however, were not lost to the elder man.

Scott felt sufficiently assured that Gertrude wouldn't say anything about his own "fatherly interest" in her. He had apparently convinced her that this interest was natural and harmless, yet he knew sue had yielded against her will.

For a girl of seventeen, who was holding her first position in the business world, Gertrude seemed to have absorbed some very emphatic opinions about a code of morals. Scott wondered where she got them. If he had stopped to consider the sophisticated young lady from the Fatherless Children Association, he would have ceased to ponder the matter, and probably have dispensed with Miss Wiggins' services. The thought of her coaching his private secretary in the ways of the worldly hadn't occurred to him. He knew that Gertrude had reluctantly surrendered to his importunities, and that this very reluctance was his own protection.

Only one thing worried him. That was the haunting vision of Paul Montgomery.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Tabloid Fables

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

WHY, Mother, do you contend that odd numbers are unlucky when referring to children?

Because, Child, when a man and wife get a divorce an even number of children is easier to divide.

What, Mother, is meant by having a snap?

It is something, Child, that no one really has but children. Their mothers take care of them and their fathers pay the bills. They never have a snap again.

Is life pleasanter in any way, Mother dear, than it was a generation ago?

Yes, dear, in one particular. One of the joys of life today is that every one in the house isn't scared to death every evening by father grumbling because he can't find the bootjack.

Is it true, Mother, that after a woman has married and had children the only compliment she gets is when they eat heartily of her cooking?

Oh, no, Child. She gets one other. Every time father and the children enter the house the first question each asks is, "Where's mother?"

Why do you say, Mother, that the woman at the station with three children is going to visit her mother?

Because, My Child, when a woman has as many as three children no one else in the world invites her.

What, Mother, is a megaphone?

It is an instrument, Daughter, that has never attained its real purpose. It is used at railroad stations for calling trains, but is more greatly needed in a family where there are children for Father to talk through when he wants Mother on the other side of the table to hear him above the noise.

Is it true, Mother Dear, that everything old-fashioned comes back in time?

With one exception, Daughter; the woman who saved the train by flagging it with a red petticoat. She will never come back.

What, Mother, do the papers mean when they talk of the menace that threatens every American home?

I do not know what they mean Child, being little versed in politics, but in my opinion the menace that threatens every American home is that Father will become the hired man, and Mother the hired girl, to their family.

What, Mother Mine, is meant by "Abandoned sacrament of love?"

It is the woman's magazine way of saying that a man forgot, when getting off to work in the morning, to kiss his wife.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks ranged higher this afternoon, there being a resumption of buying and the volume of business increasing considerably. New Haven again led the advance.

In New York after midday gains included Canadian Pacific 1, Southern Pacific ⅝, Reading ⅝, Lehigh Valley 1¾, New Haven 1, Northern Pacific 1⅛, Union Pacific 1¼, Baltimore & Ohio ⅝, American Tobacco ⅝, American Can ⅝, Steel ⅝, Amalgamated 1 and American Smelting 1⅛.

In Boston Alloues was up a point and most coppers showed gains. Hedge Hog & Maine was well up, New Haven ½, Elevated ½ and American Telephone ⅝. United Fruit was off ⅝.

PRICES ADVANCE AND REACT.

When the New York market opened there was a continuation of the covering movement began last week and in which there was a chance for profit taking on Saturday. Early transactions were on a higher level as a Monday. But as soon as demand died bears took courage and put enough pressure on the list to wipe out most gains. New Haven was the strong feature at the start because of heavy short interest and a disposition will soon be ratified. But it receded until it showed a small loss. The market soon became dull.

In London before trading began on this side there was a better tone to American stocks and Canadian Pacific advanced a point. There was a better feeling all over over the end of liquidation, although it was still regarded as very serious. Sentiment was helped by the report that Premier Asquith had no intention of firing the mine by having Ulster leaders arrested, as said the London market let has become oversold. There was not much business on continental account and speculation on the Paris bourse at a standstill because of the political situation in France. In Berlin there is fear of tighter money at the end of this month.

COPPERS IN MORE DEMAND.

There was a better demand for copper yesterday. New York reports the first hour reports concerning the metal situation being as encouraging as ever. There was a substantial advance in London. Word from Berlin it is reported from abroad that consumption of electrolytic is increasing rather than waning in Europe. While industries are inactive in the United States, they are improving abroad. Foreign manufacturers are said to be greatly increase importations to this country over the present month. Fear of more competition from abroad is one of the things which is deterring American consumers of the metal from stocking up at present prices.

PRICE RANGE NARROW.

Price changes were narrow and the list irregular during the last half of the forenoon. Rumors were current that Eastern roads will be allowed to advance freight rates induced some support but issues, but a deterrent was fear that coming quarter's earnings will be unfavorable. Pressure was on American Can and weakest today. It is reported from Washington that there is likely to be considerable of rejections of several bills and that the Administration is becoming more and more inclined to tone down measures under consideration.

The reaction from the bear raid of the first hour was lacking in vim and the traders doubted if the market had courage to absorb any liberal supply of stocks. During the morning share transactions totaled but little more than 100,000. Some observers thought the market was sinking back into a rut. Steel was closely watched. It is believed that its report as to earnings for the first quarter of this year will promote buying. Buying of steel products is reported as very light for this season. There was no change in conditions at midday. Financial strategy prevailed and both gains and losses averaged small.

RAILROAD EARNINGS.

According to an Interstate Commerce Commission statement for January last the operating revenues of steam railroads in the United States totalled 226,618,120. Freight receipts amounted to $156,074,161. Operating expenses footed up to $175,067,001 and net revenue amounted to $51,551,029. For the six months ended January operating revenue totalled $1,338,517,592, out of which $1,232,044,821 went for operating expenses.

NEW HAVEN TANGLE.

Chairman Elliott of the New Haven system is back in New York after spending most of his time for several weeks in Washington trying to straighten out the tangle existing over steam railroad. He has not reached between the railroad representatives and those of the Department of Justice will be taken up by the New Haven directorate at a meeting on Thursday. If the directors approve of the plan, it will be submitted to stockholders. After that the Massachusetts legislature will consider the matter and Governor Walsh will make known his attitude to it.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The London copper warrants market was firm this morning, spot being up 13s. 9d. and futures 10s. at noon.

Higher wages for farm hands may help to account for the increased cost of food. The Department of Agriculture reports that the pay of agricultural laborers increased 3 per cent. in four years. The rise in 1913 was 2¾ per cent.

The Interborough Co. reports that its net operating revenue decreased $462,588 during February. The shrinkage for eight months was $2,551,349.

Net earnings of Standard Oil of Indiana subsidiaries last year totaled approximating $21,000,000. This is about 70 per cent on the capital stock of the corporation. Now $30,000,000 is held in a Federal court, but did not have to pay.

The Boston bank statement shows a surplus reserve increase of $112,429.

Stocks which sold ex-dividend today included American Agricultural preferred $1, preferred $1.50 and Island Creek Coal preferred $1.50 reingeners were buyers of Americ tocks in New York today. Definitions on that account being ted at about 5,000 shares.

WEALTH, SAYS FORBES, IS BUT UNSPENT LABOR

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

"Labor creates all wealth. Labor is entitled to all it creates."

You are hearing that sentiment with increasing frequency. Let's discuss it.

What is "labor"?

• • •

Who are "laborers" and who are not?

• • •

What is wealth?

• • •

Wealth is stored up, unspent, undissipated labor.

• • •

Revolutionary orators are fond of declaiming to manual toilers: "You create everything, you workers."

• • •

"Labor" does not consist solely of those who work with their hands.

If work more today than when I pulled turnips, hoed corn and did other farm labor I am as much a part of "labor" as I was then. If I choose to save, to store up some of the reward for my work and to use it when I am old, instead of spending my work-fruits as I go along, I become a "capitalist." But am I not entitled to reap benefit from my self-denial, from my husbandry of my labor—my wages?

• • •

It is mischievous to create the impression that labor comprises only those who work with their coats off or who earn a daily, weekly or monthly wage.

• • •

Mr. Hearst works harder than any of the thousands he employs. He is the real director of every one of his scores of publications. He does not only keep tabs on them all, but originates, inspires and guides their tremendous activities. Is he not entitled to be classed as a part of "labor"?

• • •

I spent Saturday evening with a business man. He once worked for a salary, but, being able, ambitious and a saver, he started on his own account. He has built up a large, successful organization of which he is the mainspring, the life. He took me through him a staggering mass of correspondence, replies to which he will have dictated into a dictaphone before he returns (carrying the records) to his office this morning. He is always up late to ponder over the growth of his business. Is he not a laborer? He is—a mighty industrious laborer.

• • •

The more I dig into the origin of conspicuously successful concerns the more fully am I convinced that invariably some man or men have worked with titanic energy, with superior intelligence and with thoroughness of character to lay solid foundations. Few men of eminence in any line have attained that without working very, very hard. Run your mind over the nation's leaders, including those who you will be impressed by the fact that they did not confine their labors to eight hours a day.

• • •

Rockefeller, Roosevelt, Carnegie, Edison, Westinghouse, Ford, Wanamaker, Harriman, Vanderbilt, Gary, Griffin, Bigelow, Taft, Wilson—won their place by labor, labor, labor.

I cannot here enter into an abstruse discussion of whether manual labor deserves a more favorable proportion of the earnings of industry. In many instances employers undeniably arrogate to themselves an unfair share. Among the lower reaches of employment there is shameful underpaying, and to my mind this problem ere long will have to be tackled with remedies. It is disgraceful that any human being should live in flagrant luxury and pile up an inordinate bank account out of starvation wages and sweatshop methods.

• • •

But the only point I want to emphasize today is that "labor" embraces all those who work and is not confined to so-called "working men."

• • •

Therefore, when an incendiary proclaims that "Labor creates all wealth," and bids him to that he means by labor. Also ask him what wealth is.

• • •

We are all laborers, those of us who contribute to the world's work. We all aspire, to the best of our ability, to become owners of a store up for future use or for the use of our families or friends some of the fruits of our industry. And it has been ordained that the more we can save the more rapidly we can gather and devote to industry—the better it will be for humanity, since an abundance of "capital" money tends to stimulate production and increase and cheapen life's necessaries.

• • •

As to what percentage of huge fortunes should be taken by the State when their owners die, that is another question, not to be treated of the end of an article already too long.

BOSTON AMERICAN

50 AND 52 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MARCH 23, 1914.

The Greatest Business Organization in the World Has Declared for Free Tolls for American Coastwise Ships

The Boston Chamber of Commerce has gone on record in favor of the exemption of American coastwise ships from the payment of tolls in the Panama Canal.

This is what the greatest business organization in the world says in its annual report on the Panama toll question:

> The Chamber favors preferential or free tolls for American ships engaged in coastwise commerce and advocates the extension of the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission to authorize that body to investigate any combination of carriers formed to stifle competition between rail and water ways, with penalties therefor, and to prohibit unreasonable rates.
> The bill passed establishing free tolls for American ships engaged in coastwise commerce, prohibits railroads from holding any interest whatever in water carriers with which they compete, through the Panama Canal or elsewhere.

This is the judgment of FIVE THOUSAND LEADING BUSINESS MEN in this community who are vitally interested in the welfare of New England and who know or ought to know how much New England will gain from a discrimination in favor of American vessels in the canal.

The Democratic party at its last National Convention at Baltimore declared, "WE FAVOR THE EXEMPTION FROM TOLLS OF AMERICAN SHIPS ENGAGED IN COASTWISE TRADE PASSING THROUGH THE PANAMA CANAL." Immediately after the Democracy thus spoke in its platform, the Democratic majority in Congress passed a bill exempting American ships from toll charges, according to the promise in the Democratic platform.

The Democratic Convention was held in July. In less than six weeks, on August 4, the Democrats had passed the bill exempting American ships from toll charges and on the very next day Mr. Wilson, then the Democratic candidate for President, declared himself in favor of this bill in the following language:

> One of the bills pending, just passed by Congress, passed, I believe, yesterday, by the Senate as it had passed the House, provides for free tolls for American ships through that canal and and prohibits any ship from passing through that canal which is owned by any American railway company. You see the object of that, don't you? We don't want the railways to compete with themselves; because we understand that kind of competition. We want the water carriage to compete with the land carriage, so as to be perfectly sure that you are going to get better rates around by the canal than you would across the continent.

The National Progressive Convention which nominated Roosevelt for President declared also in favor of free tolls, and President Taft, the Republican President, signed the bill which gave free tolls.

The party honor of every Democrat and every Progressive binds him to vote in favor of free tolls. President Wilson is not a despot or a tyrant in this country. If he chooses to change his mind and give no reason for the change, if he chooses to repudiate the obligation of his party platform and make no excuse for it, if he is willing to proclaim to the country and to the world that a platform is nothing but a cheat and delusion, an organized method of obtaining votes under false pretences, let him do so. But no Congressman can hide behind his skirts under the pretence that he is actuated by any consideration of honor.

There are just two influences which will make any Congressman vote in favor of repealing the law which exempts American ships from the payment of tolls. These are the two influences:

1. The transcontinental railroads whose interest President Wilson has clearly pointed out in the statement quoted above.

2. The power of the President's patronage, the postoffices and other jobs which he is still able to give and for which some Congressmen would sell their birthright.

Those who vote to repudiate their party principles as laid down in the platforms of the Democratic and Progressives parties, to ignore the interests of New England as expressed by the great Chamber of Commerce, to surrender a vital right in the greatest scientific achievement of the modern world, so important to us as a commercial and military possession, at the command of one man, who gives no reason for his own flop, and at the command of the great railroads who want to keep up freight rates in this country, those gentlemen, when they come for re-election, may find that the people have better memories than they are credited with having.

Certainly if the AMERICAN has the power to keep this flagrant betrayal of American interests green in the minds of the constituents of those who are guilty of this betrayal, it will not soon be forgotten.

If You Saw a Man Throwing Money in the Street You Would Say He Was Crazy:

We are too fond of saying, whenever a man does a thing of which we do not approve—SEND HIM TO JAIL. We do not stop to consider that that man may be forced by some weakness in himself to act as he does; or that he may not know he is not acting as we wish; or that he may be SICK.

The report of the Commission to Investigate Drunkenness in Massachusetts has some pertinent things to say on this matter—and it says them! That report is now being considered by a legislative committee. You would do well to get a copy of it, and read it over, and THINK ABOUT IT.

The commission believes that HABITUAL DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE. Will you continue to send sick men to jail?

When a drunkard is sent to jail, three things happen:

He loses his job.

His family loses his support.

He comes out thirsty.

When you force a drunkard to pay a fine—HIS FAMILY PAYS IT. Thus, when a drunkard is fined or imprisoned, it doesn't help him; and it does hurt his INNOCENT family.

The Commission believes—and when you read the facts they have set down, you will believe—that an habitual drunkard needs hospital treatment; and that in the case of an occasional drunkard, imprisonment or fine usually means another debauch, rather than a reformation.

The Commission recommends half a dozen exceedingly important reforms which the Legislature should adopt. The Commission believes we need in Boston a hospital for the treatment of delirium tremens. At present, such cases are usually handled at the Relief Hospital, with inadequate facilities and equipment. The proposed hospital should also serve as an observation and receiving ward, where cases of habitual drunkenness might be studied as any other disease is studied. The Commission believes doctors should have more to do with the handling of drunkards than policemen. The Commission would aid the work and add to the powers of the institution at Foxboro.

All these matters the Legislature should consider most favorably. But above all else:

LET US NO LONGER SEND SICK MEN TO JAIL.

A DREAM OF SPRINGTIME

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XLIV.

HARRY SOMERDYKE was later than he had meant to be when he met Ben Hadley on the Nantasket boat. Indeed he had promised to be at least fifteen minutes ahead of time so that he and Ben might secure good seats. But, as has been seen, he arrived just in time to get on board before the boat left the pier. And Kelley Delaine was the person who had made him late.

The author, after parting from Julia Marvin, started for his apartments, his thoughts full of the girl and what she had told him. He knew now that he loved her, and to him love meant service. What could he do to make her life bright even if he could not win her affection? There was no doubt in his mind as to what were the trouble and distress of Julia's life. They were her uncertainty and anxiety about Caryl. Since Caryl was in his employ, and since it was his friend who had taken her out to luncheon and on an automobile ride without her sister's knowledge, surely it was his—Kelley Delaine's—duty to try to keep any harm from coming to the girl.

It was well enough for him to tell Julia that he would try to guard her sister and to influence her to be discreet and circumspect, but it was quite another thing for him to win Caryl's confidence and to persuade her that he had only her good at heart. She was such a vain little creature, so avid of adoration, so headstrong, that he felt baffled when he tried to imagine himself arguing with her. Still, he had given his word and meant to do his best. But surely it would be wise for him to remove temptation from her path, if possible. And in this case temptation meant Harry Somerdyke.

Harry Somerdyke, as the only son of a rich man, now dead, had done pretty much as he pleased since childhood. Delaine had known him intimately when the two were young lads together, but for the past five years Harry had been out of the United States—spending much of his time playing at engineering in Venezuela—and the friends had seen little of each other. In their few conversations since Somerdyke's return to Boston, where he expected to remain for only a little while—Delaine felt how much the man had changed and how divergent were their views on many subjects. Yet surely he had still at heart some of the good old principles, to which as young men they had both subscribed, and through these he could be reached. Harry was thoughtless, self-indulgent and full of fun, but he was not evil.

Remembering all this, Delaine changed his course, and instead of going home went straight to Somerdyke's hotel. Upon inquiry he learned that Harry had just come in and was in his room, where Kelley was conducted after he had announced himself on the house telephone.

"Hello, old man!" Harry greeted him cordially. "What's up? I saw you only just now, and here you blow in an hour later. Sit down and have a smoke while I dress."

"Thanks, no," Delaine replied. "Go on dressing—don't mind me. I can only stay for a few minutes, as I'm due at my apartment to dinner and you want to feed also."

"If I didn't have an engagement in a little while I'd insist on your eating here with me," said Harry. "But I'm just going to get a bite and then meet Ben Hadley, who is in town for a few days. We're going down to Nantasket just for the sail, and we'll have supper after our return. By the way, I've almost persuaded Ben to go to South America when I go back. There's a good engineering opening there for him. You remember Ben—don't you? He's from Baltimore, you know."

"Sure! I knew him at school, but haven't seen him for years."

"Pretty good chap, commented Harry, "and first rate company."

"Well, I won't keep you from him long," said Delaine. "To come to the point, Harry, I want to speak to you about my little stenographer. No—don't laugh," as Somerdyke grinned. "She's of no consequence to me except that she's in my employ. But she's a good girl, Harry, and young and susceptible. Don't let her make a fool of herself over you, old man. She probably has never had a man pay her any attention before."

Then, so gravely that Somerdyke listened with more outward seriousness than was natural to him, Delaine told him of these two girls—how they had come to Boston from an uncongenial home to earn their own living, that they were having a hard time, and that the older one was trying to be both mother and sister to the younger one.

"Believe me, she's got her hands full if she expects to keep tab on that giddy little creature," Somerdyke commented. "I say, Kel, you seem mightily interested in that same solicitous older sister."

"I am," Delaine affirmed calmly, although he hoped that Kelley would not notice that his face grew a shade darker. "I am interested in any good, refined woman who is fighting as fairly and honestly as she is. And as I don't want to see her miserable, I'm asking you not to make a fool of her sister. For, Harry, you know you don't care a rap about her except to have fun with her."

Harry Somerdyke was an easy-loving mortal with no very strong principles of any kind. Delaine was right when he said that he cared little for Caryl Marvin except to amuse himself with her. Yet, if she threw herself at his head the fault was not his. However, as he had not seen her nor heard from her since their parting last week, she seemed less of a temptation and less attractive than when he was with her. And he liked Kelley and was willing to please him if he could do so without inconvenience to himself.

"All right!" he agreed. "I promise to let the girl alone—that is, not to seek her out, unless, of course, she takes the initiative and sends for me. Which isn't likely."

"Not at all likely," observed Delaine dryly. "She and her sister are ladies, you know—not adventuresses."

Then, dropping the subject abruptly, he talked of the horse of which Somerdyke had told him, saying he would "look him over" tomorrow.

Ten minutes later he went away, almost satisfied with his interview, leaving Somerdyke just time to gulp down a sandwich before hurrying off to meet Ben Hadley on the Nantasket boat.

When Uncle Sam Bought Alaska

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

WHEN Uncle Sam got his deed for Alaska, forty-seven years ago, a great many members of his family poked all sorts of fun at him, and not a few felt like cursing him for squandering his good money upon such a worthless piece of property. But it is realized today that the very best of Uncle Sam's good angels were busy on his behalf when that deal was made. It is now seen that if ever there was a "bargain" it was when Seward bought "Russian America," as Alaska was then called, paying for it the trifling sum of $7,200,000—not much more than the price of a modern multimillionaire's town house.

Alaska contains 590,000 square miles, an area exceeding that of the original thirteen States of the Union, about one-fifth of the area of the United States, and nearly equal to the combined areas of the New England, Middle and Southern States east of the Father of Waters.

Its annual output of gold alone is more than the price that was paid for it—$8,000,000. Its total gold production since it was purchased is over $59,000,000. Its direct revenue to the government in the meantime has exceeded $12,000,000. Its pack of salmon each year is worth $5,000,000, and the market value of its annual fur product amounts to $4,000,000.

And this is only the beginning. Hundreds of millions of dollars are being invested in the development of the region; railroads are being built; lines of freight and passenger steamers are being established, and where, at the time of the purchase, there was nothing but a "howling wilderness," supposed to be utterly worthless, may be seen "bustling" towns with all the signs of an up-to-date civilization.

Martyrdom Won't Jibe With Common Sense!

The Domestic Variety, in Particular, Instead of Being Angelic, Is All Too Frequently Just Plain, Every Day Foolish.

By DOROTHY DIX

THE grotesquely tragic thing about martyrdom is that it is almost always entirely unnecessary. The martyr need not be a martyr if he or she had an inch of backbone, or a thimbleful of good, hard horse sense. This is particularly true of the domestic martyr who is not a pin feathered angel, as she is painted, but just a plain goose.

The thing that calls forth the above heartfelt words is the case of a young friend of mine. This girl is the oldest of a large family, and when her mother died four years ago she became the little house mother to the family. She was only sixteen then. She is but twenty now, at the very age when a girl should be most carefree and happy, for these few years are the playtime in the average woman's life, and the only playtime she ever knows.

Instead of that, this girl has cooked, and cleaned, and washed, and mended, and sewed for her father and four husky brothers and a little sister only a year younger than herself. She is the most industrious little creature in the world, and the best manager and a real genius in one of the finest of the arts—cooking.

The father, the four big brothers and the sister all go out to work and earn good salaries, but the girl who stays at home and slaves from morning till night to make the balance of them comfortable and give them just the sort of things they want to eat, is paid not one cent for her labor.

Furthermore, the wage-earners of the family have figured down, her housekeeping expenses to the last possible penny, and she is not given one cent more than the actual cost of food and fuel and rent on which to run the place. And, as if this wasn't enough tyranny and stinginess, they complain bitterly when she doesn't set a tenderloin steak table on a stew meat income, and when it isn't forthcoming the girl is blamed for not making one dollar do the work of five.

Nothing could be grayer or more forlorn than this little housewife's life, and it offers no prospect of improvement. She can never save up any money because she has none to save. She cannot dress prettily and go to places of amusement, as does her sister who has her own pay envelope. She cannot even look forward to marrying, because her family cannily discourage men callers because they don't want to lose a cook.

Besides, which Cinderella in the kitchen hasn't got as good a chance as the wicked sister in the parlor, no matter what the fairy tales say. So all that this girl sees in the way of a future is shaving for her family until her brothers and sisters get married and she is old, and will have to go and be a dependent on some in-law who doesn't want her.

She's a domestic martyr if there ever was one, but there isn't a particle of use in her being rousted at the stake. She's got the remedy in her hands if she'll only use it. So has every other domestic woman who is misused, and put upon in her own family.

And the remedy is just to go on a strike. If this girl would turn out her gas ranges and go and sit herself down in her parlor and present an ultimatum to her family to the effect that there would not be another meal cooked in that house nor another bed made nor another floor swept nor another button sewed on until justice was done her and a satisfactory financial arrangement made, she could get out of the martyr class before you could say scat.

She should demand a fair housekeeping allowance to be made her, or else she should turn in her butcher book and grocery book and expense accounts to the family, and let them divide it out among themselves.

And above all, she should demand an adequate salary for her own services.

We talk a lot about family affection, but as a matter of fact there are no other people in the world who impose on us so ruthlessly as our own. It is only his own wife, or daughter, that a man expects to slave in a kitchen eight or ten hours a day for her board and whatever clothes he chooses to give her. Strangers have some rights, but if she gets them in the family circle, she's got to stand up and fight for them.

Heretofore women have regarded themselves as helpless. They have felt that they had to submit to any treatment that their menkind accorded them.

"What am I to do?" one will ask. "I work harder than any slave. I economize and pinch until I get the last squeal out of every nickel, but my husband never gives me a penny of my own. I have to go to him like a beggar every time I want a spool of thread or carfare, and before I get it I have to tell what I expect to do with it; and after I have spent it I have to tell what I did do with it. I realize that this isn't fair. I do just as much work for my husband does, and am just as much a factor in his prosperity, but how am I to collect what is due me? I'd be glad and thankful to get the wages of a cook paid me as wages, for my very own to spend as I like."

To this woman I say also: Go out on strike, madam. Don't do another lick of work. Don't turn another domestic wheel until you force a fair settlement out of your husband. Just one day of the confusion worse confounded of a home in which nobody has mended the baby nor dressed the children or cleared the table or swept the floors or provided any food or done any of the other millions of things that a housewife attends to every day will convince a husband that the laborer is worthy of her hire, even if she is his wife.

So I repeat again, that there is no reason for a woman to be a domestic martyr unless she really enjoys martyrdom. You can bring any man to terms by interfering with his conduct.

Why the Deserted Brides?

By JOSEPHINE H. LAWRENCE

Superintendent of the Social Service Department of the County Court, Chicago.

I have come to this conclusion in considering the social and economic evils that bring the hundreds of married women to the county court for support.

The grandmothers began in a log house with a frying pan, table and chair, were honeymoon and knit their own stockings, while now the girls must have steam heated apartments, mahogany furniture, Paris gowns and automobiles.

The girl of today expects her husband to provide all this regardless of his income, and the prospective husband has no idea of how far his income will reach. They rush headlong into marriage, and soon find themselves tangled in debts and obligations they cannot meet. Children have added to their burden, and the life that looked so rosy has become one of drudgery and despair.

The brides of the twentieth century cannot live within a modest income, because they are better versed in bridge and tango than in bread making. Mothers make a great mistake in training their daughters with the idea that they are going to marry wealth, instead of training them so that they can adapt themselves to all circumstances.

Hundreds of these unfortunate brides come seeking relief, wearing a wisp of paradise, a slit skirt, gold mesh bag and other evidences of extravagance and misapplication of income.

Experience has taught me that much of this poverty and distress could be prevented by proper investigation before marriage. I am advocating the establishment of a marriage bureau exacting a financial test of every applicant. Before securing a license the man should be compelled to answer such questions as: "Have you a trade or profession? Are you permanently employed? What is your salary?"

If it be disclosed that he is earning less than fifteen dollars a week and has no income from any other source, his right to a license should be challenged.

This bureau should also be instrumental in preventing the marriage of minors. The county institutions are flooded with victims of these marriages, young, irresponsible youths marrying for a day and leaving child wives with babes in their arms, because with them all of the responsibility they did not realize would be theirs.

We have a regular "Rogues' Gallery" of photographs of young husbands who have deserted their families. These boys are not altogether to blame. They are too young to realize what marriage means, how it entails sacrifices, privations and self effacement for the husband without abundant means, and when self denial, such as giving up cigarettes for baby's certified milk, is demanded, they become disheartened and give up.

It rests with the people to demand laws that will prevent these alliances that are filling the orphan asylums with dependents.
